Editorial

By Preston A. Sweet
Owner, Main Street Comics and Books

After much study and thought I've discovered what's wrong with the comics industry.

In simple terms, I am.

I have a reputation for supporting small-press titles. I came up with Diamond's comic-book sampler program as well as the 40-and-5 direct-order program (with help from Dave Sim). Each month I get at least 20 pieces of promotional mail and two or three sample comics. Despite all this, the chances of my trying any new small-press title are slim. I've just been burned too often by too many creators and small publishers.

First, I must say that creators are the entire reason for there being a comics industry. There are creators and there are customers. The rest of us just facilitate communication between the two. That being said, I think most creators and small publishers wouldn't survive a year as a retailer. You see, we retailers have to take our obligations seriously. The rent is paid, or we're out on the street. Our suppliers are paid, or we don't get product. If we don't work hard enough and smart enough to generate enough money so that everyone else gets paid (long before any hope that we get paid), we are gone. It's that simple.

Yet far too many creators feel that we must live our lives around what they want. That they can't be bothered by the fact that we have put time, money, and effort into promoting their products, only to be stuck when they don't or can't produce. In the August 1997 Diamond Previews Kelley Jones writes about supporting "diversity" and mentions several "successful" titles. One of these is Steve Bissette's Tyrant. I think Bissette is an incredible talent. I met him before Tyrant #1 shipped and he sent me a T-Shirt and a signed preview copy. But the last issue of Tyrant shipped in April 1996. The one before that shipped in April 1995. Even if one ships tomorrow, it's dead on arrival. A few diehards (including me) will pick it up, but its potential to attract and keep new readers is gone. I can't remember what Kelley Jones' new title is, but I didn't order it.

I like Martin Wagner's Hepcats so much it almost hurts. I'm buying each issue of the reprint series for myself just to get the few new pages each one contains. But it, too, is past hope. I ordered high on the reprint series, hoping that its monthly schedule would allow me to attract new readers. It, however, has been chronically late, and I've returned more than 50% of what I ordered. I also had to return nearly half my order of Leave It to Chance #5. This had the potential to be a breakout series, but it was so late that I couldn't move a single copy off the rack.

When Starchild went to Capital City, I had to order copies from Westfield and pay in advance. I forget how late the issues that eventually arrived were, but I know I had to get a refund for the ones that never shipped.

While I may be a cold-hearted jerk, I'm not a total cold-hearted jerk. I enjoyed Arcana by Wells and Clark and always ordered at least one for the rack, even though it rarely sold. Arcana recently called it quits due to low sales. Now I'm stuck with comics which won't even sell at 90% off. Do I really want to go through this again?

It's often pointed out that only a small percentage of movies in development ever get made. One reason is that a movie isn't done until it's done. Audiences aren't expected to pay to see the first 10 minutes of a movie and hope that the next 10 minutes will show up in a reasonable amount of time. You don't plunk down your money until it is complete.

Yet retailers and customers are expected to show a level of commitment often not shared by a series' creator. (What the heck was the deal with THB, anyway? I don't know, and, with all due respect to the talented Paul Pope, I don't care any more.) Retailers have survived the hell of the past few years because many of us are too damn stubborn and too damn stupid to quit. Every day we open is a battle won. Every bill paid is a badge of honor. Many retailers stay open because closing is unthinkable.

I'd like to see that kind of attitude from more creators. I'd like to see more like Drew Hayes of Poison Elves fame, who, I believe, would crawl through broken glass with a 300-pound retailer on his back to make it to his next issue. (As many of you know, as a self-publisher, Hayes survived being dropped by Diamond. I think he could drink Rasputin under the table.)

Right now, I believe every new title in Previews is being published by some self-important twit who thinks the world should throw riches at his feet for the mere act of being. Then, when sales don't meet his ego-inflated expectations, he will blame retailers for lack of support. ("My comic book sells itself, so why didn't you do enough to sell it? Why don't you buy my book on a non-returnable basis and then sell it with a money-back guarantee? Why don't you dedicate your every waking moment to the promotion of my comic book?") Of course, those retailers who did show strong support for the comic book are rewarded with unsalable comics and the sense of being taken once again.

That's why I now prefer selling "real" books. When a book is done, it's done. I can support an author by buying one copy of a $5.99 book for about $3.60. No long-term commitment. No having to order issue #8 when #3 hasn't shipped yet. And, best of all, no authors crying to me that I haven't done enough for them. There are certainly plenty of retailers who continue to support diversity, and I have nothing but respect and admiration for them. There are also those who have always been conservative in their stocking, and I can't fault them for sticking with what works. So what's left (and what's changed) are those retailers like me, who have simply gotten sick of trying.

And, perhaps, we are what is keeping the industry down. Maybe some day I'll see publishers and creators show the same level of commitment retailers are expected to show day after day. Then, maybe, things will improve. Until then, I confess to being personally responsible for all the industry's woes.

Preston A. Sweet, owner of Main Street Comics and Books, hopes that chronically late creators will work on their comics instead of writing to him at 2351 College Station Rd., #447, Athens, GA 30605.

Big and small distributors gear up for possible third week of strike

By Michael Dean

At press time, the strike by UPS workers continued to take its toll on the comics market.

Looking at a possible third week without UPS, Diamond Comic Distributors prepared to once again orchestrate a Thursday release at distribution centers and an expanded network of pick-up sites around the country.

Whereas Diamond has shouldered the cost of shipping orders to the pick-up points during the first two weeks of the strike, Marketing Communications Director Dan Manser said, if the strike continues beyond Aug. 18, Diamond will implement a handling charge of $3 per box. Manser said this charge would offset approximately half of Diamond's set-up and delivery costs to the pick-up sites. Diamond Marketing Vice President Roger Fletcher estimated the pick-up sites have cost Diamond an additional $40,000 each week.

Diamond has also negotiated a 20% discount off Greyhound's standard delivery charges for those retailers who choose to receive shipments via that method.

The distributor has announced that products shipped within the 30-day grace period but delayed in transit will not be considered returnable.

Overall, said Manser, "both Diamond employees and retailers appear to be in good spirits. This week's shipments went pretty smoothly. But we're hoping the strike is resolved soon."

Diamond CEO Steve Geppi has written to President Clinton requesting intervention in the strike. "The strike affects not only Diamond and our suppliers," wrote Geppi, "but, most imporantly, our customers — independent retailers who rely on weekly shipments to stay in business."

Smaller distributors, which do not have the option of setting up nationwide pick-up points, are also doing their best to keep products moving to comics shops.

California-based Cold Cut is shipping to shops via Arrownet, a service which is close in price to UPS. Some small shipments are going through the U.S. Postal Service. Cold Cut co-owner Tim Stroup said, "What's hurting is getting the books to us. We have had to pick up shipments from some publishers. It's tough, because we don't yet know what all we're missing."

Stroup said Cold Cut is holding off on buying some material until after the strike is settled. "I think the retailers are having the toughest time," said Stoup. "The uncertainty is the hardest part."

At Minnesota-based Downtown Distribution, which has had to send all its shipments via U.S. Mail, owner Chris Petersen summed up his response to the strike: "It sucks. Shipping is costing more and our whole system has to be re-routed. We're putting as much through the pipeline as we can and hoping for the best."

Petersen said the strike has been a learning experience for Downtown. "This is the last time we get caught relying on only one carrier," he said. "A shipping service is one of those things you take for granted till it's not there anymore."

Virginia-based SyCo Distribution has suffered less from the strike than most distributors, because it has always shipped to retailers via RPS. "We're still feeling the effects, though," said SyCo shipping staffer Scott Shaffer, "because of the difficulty in getting in shipments. It's been OK, but slower than average."

Some retailers have been coming to Wisconsin-based FM International to collect orders, while other orders have necessitated "a lot of standing in line at the Post Office," said co-owner Jerry Stoltenberg.

Stoltenberg said FM has had success with Priority Mail, which has consistently delivered packages within two days.

"It's been a bit difficult," said Stoltenberg. "The product is moving but it's costing us more. We have been eating some of the cost. We don't want retailers to to get stuck not having product coming through."

Stoltenberg, like the other distributors, complained that, "We don't know exactly what's out there. Some products have been hung up in UPS." Stoltenberg estimated that 25% of the stalled shipments have already been replaced by the publishers.

He said returns were not expected to be an issue for FM. "With the accounts we have, returns haven't been a problem," he said.

Even after the strike is resolved, Stoltenberg predicted it will be some time before UPS catches up with its backlog.

Foglio, Palliard Press part company

Xxxenophile creator Phil Foglio has split from Palliard Press to form his own publishing company, Studio Foglio.

Xxxenophile, as well as Foglio's Buck Godot — Zap Gun for Hire, will move with him to the new company.

Palliard Press was co-owned by Foglio and Greg Ketter, owner of Dream-Haven Books in Minneapolis. Foglio said the split was an amicable parting.

Ketter told CBG Palliard will continue to publish, with an emphasis on trade paperbacks.

Upcoming projects include T-shirts and coffee mugs based on Tim Barela's Leonard and Larry strip, to be followed later in the year by a trade-paperback collection of Leonard and Larry.

The first project from Studio Foglio is The Xxxenophile Collection, published under the Xxenophile Books imprint of Studio Foglio. According to Business Manager Kaja Foglio, the reason for the imprint is "to let people know the difference between our X-rated material and our G-rated material, but it's still us."

The seventh issue of Buck Godot has been solicited for August.

Auction to raise funds for Stathis scholarship

An auction will be held Sept. 6 at Four Color Images in New York City to raise funds for an annual scholarship to the School of Visual Arts in memory of comics editor Lou Stathis.

A longtime editor of DC's Vertigo line, Heavy Metal, and other publications, Stathis died of cancer May 4 at the age of 44.

The auction to establish a scholarship fund at the New York City school was initiated by Stathis' friend and fellow Vertigo Editor Shelly Roeberg, Vertigo Executive Editor Karen Berger, DC Manager of Marketing Communications Patty Jeres, and DC Director of Direct Market Sales Bob Wayne.

The growing list of artists and writers who have donated items for the auction includes John Bolton, Jon J Muth, Neil Gaiman, Kyle Baker, George Pratt, Phil Jimenez, Michael Zulli, Duncan Fegredo, Sean Phillips, Michael Lark, Dean Motter, Teddy Kristiansen, Mark Chiarello, Grant Morrison, and Ted McKeever.

Telephone bids will be accepted from those unable to attend. For a complete list of items to be auctioned, the gallery can be contacted at (212) 431-4234.

Marvel sues Awesome, alleges Fighting American too close to Captain America

By Michael Dean

A hearing has been scheduled for Aug. 18 to consider a lawsuit filed against Awesome Entertainment LLC by Marvel Entertainment Group, which contends that a new Fighting American series from Awesome violates Marvel's copyright and trade dress rights for Captain America.

The Fighting American was created by Joe Simon and Jack Kirby and recently licensed to Awesome President and CEO Rob Liefeld and Awesome Publisher and Executive Vice President Jeph Loeb.

In a statement, Marvel said its objection was "not to Joe Simon's and Jack Kirby's original Fighting American or to any new series based on that source, but to Awesome's particular rendition of Fighting American, which appears to have drawn far more inspiration from Captain America than from its purported source."

Awesome announced its intention to publish a Fighting American series shortly after Liefeld was dropped from the creative team of Marvel's Heroes Reborn relaunch of Captain America.

Liefeld and Loeb said that Marvel's suit is "without merit" and that they intend to publish The Fighting American this summer, as scheduled.

Simon told CBG he has been reluctantly caught in the middle of the conflict and would issue an affidavit in defense of Awesome's Fighting American.

"I have very good relations with Terry Stewart at Marvel, and they have assured me the suit has nothing to do with me," Simon said, "but, in the end, I will have to side with my character."

Simon said he had seen Liefeld and Loeb's version of The Fighting American and found it satisfactory. He said Awesome had been issued the license without any restrictions on Liefeld and Loeb's handling of the character.

"Jeph Loeb has been great to work with," he said. "I'm sorry it has come to this, but we have to be on Awesome's side."

Golden Age collection discovered after fire

By Mike Nicastre

When a field is as closely watched as the comic-book back-issue market, the discovery or loss of a large collection can send ripples through that market.

Due to a recent tragedy, the market received an influx of new old issues, as well as a glimpse of what might have been.

On a cold December night in 1996, a man spotted a fire from a house, set back in an area of the woods, that he believed was uninhabited. By the time the fire department found its way up the overgrown dirt road, Walter Van Buren was dead and with him the better part of 50 years of memorabilia.

Comics, toys, books — anything collectible: Van Buren had saved it all, tucked away in a little house in the backwoods of New York's Catskills. He had filled every available square inch of the house with the treasures of a lifetime.

He had been such a recluse that neighbors hadn't even known he was there, a fact that may have contributed to his death. In those first moments of the blaze, a faster response might have meant the difference between life and death.

Despite the destruction by fire, smoke, and water, some of Van Buren's hoard survived. Among the ruins, his family discovered Golden Age comics filed in cabinets that had escaped the ravages of the fire.

Comic books that survived were runs of All Star #1-30, All American #15-30, Captain America #1-75, Batman #1-65, Timelys, Dells, and many others.

The family approached John Grasse of DJ's Comics in Meriden, Conn., to sell the remnants of the collection. Many of the comics miraculously were in pristine condition, despite the fact that they had never been bagged or boarded.

Comic books that were conspicuous by their absence were runs of Detective and Action. It wasn't until Grasse visited the site of the fire that the question of what had become of them was resolved: They had been at the center of most of the destruction and were lost.

Of the comics that survived, some showed the signs of wear associated with repeated readings that reflected the love for the medium that Van Buren obviously had had.

Grasse said he has let some of the comic books go to selected collectors but is holding on to some of the key issues for himself.

Without the knowledge of the hobby's mainstream collectors, Van Buren had begun his collection in the 1930s and continued to build on it for 50 years.

The passing of his legacy into the hands of fellow comics lovers has excited collectors, many of whom never would have believed a collection of this size and scope could still be hidden in the rural hills of America.

Whatever happened to the real Archie and the Riverdale gang?

Where did Archie artist Bob Montana get the inspiration for what would become one of the country's longest-running comic strips and the foundation of an entire comic-book line? Simple. Montana sat at his table in The Chocolate Shop doodling on a napkin, as the Riverdale gang paraded past. When Jughead or Archie or Betty walked in, he would ask what they'd been up to lately.

The results of those conversations and experiences Montana turned into a comic strip that is still running nearly 60 years later in more than 100 newspapers around the world and in a line of comic books that continues to generate new isses of about 15 titles each month. Of course, Montana and writer Vic Bloom changed a few things. Jughead's real name, for instance, was Skinny Linehan. The Chocolate Shop became The Choklit Shop in the strip. And Riverdale itself was actually a town in Massachusetts called Haverhill. Despite the changes, however, Haverhill residents had no difficulty recognizing themselves, as they reminisced for Boston Sunday Globe correspondent Kathy McCabe. In the May 25 article, Charles Hayden, 75, a friend and former classmate of Montana's, was quoted as saying, "Bob Montana was a nice guy, a quiet kid in high school, who was always asking me on Monday mornings, 'What did you all do on the weekend?' When I first saw Jughead, I said right away, 'That's Skinny Linehan.' "

Archie readers may experience déjà vu if they happen to pass by the Haverhill City Hall. That's because the building is the former Haverhill High School, Montana's alma mater, complete with a statute like the Thinker statue that stands in front of Riverdale High School.

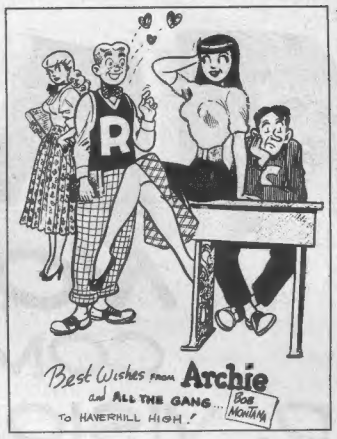
English teacher George Manoogian was quoted as saying, "There's no doubt about it. There are people that [Montana] used as models still living in Haverhill."

Haverhill residents can point to the people who came to populate Archie comics throughout old Haverhill High yearbooks, including the principal who was the basis for Mr. Weatherbee and the school's longtime librarian believed to be the model for Miss Grundy. The original Jughead is dead, and the model for Moose reportedly passed away last year. The real Archie had an advantage over the fictional Archie when it came to choosing between Betty and Veronica, in that he was two different people, one of whom eventually moved to Florida and the other to Maine. Neither, however, ended up with either Betty or Veronica. The original Betty is reportedly married and still living in Haverhill but declined to be interviewed by the Globe. And Archie never really had a chance with the woman who inspired Veronica Lodge, film star Veronica Lake.

Today, Montana, who died in 1974, is featured in the Haverhill Hall of Fame at the public library, and a copy of his high-school diary and early drawings of Archie are kept in the library's special collections. Rita Trottier Walker, who attended high school with Montana, was quoted as saying, "He really became a hero for us. I thought it was absolutely marvelous that he would take time to put characters from a little city in Massachusetts into his comic strip."

Yellowed Journalism: The original 'Riverdale High' interviews Bob Montana

Haverhill High School student reporters interviewed Archie artist and Haverhill alumnus Bob Montana for an article in the Jan. 7, 1955 issue of the school's paper, Brown and Gold, chummily referring to him as Bob (while calling the HHS principal "Mr. MacLeod"). "Bob" recounted his early days, which included drawing cartoons at the age of 4, performing rope tricks, and singing harmony in his father's vaudeville act. Montana's father was a banjo player and his mother was in the Ziegfeld Follies. Their professions required so much travel that Montana attended 13 schools around the country before spending three years at Haverhill High School. He moved again just before graduating and got his degree from Manchester (N.H.) High School. "It broke my heart to move to Manchester," Montana told Brown and Gold, "especially since I had been elected a Senior Class Officer at HHS."



Brown and Gold reported that Archie's heart-throb Betty was based on an ex-girlfriend of Montana's. Montana, however, ended up marrying "pretty Peggy Wherett who could easily be a model for Bob's teen-age girls" after spending three and a half years as a sergeant in World War II. (See the accompanying Boston Globe clip for more real-life counterparts of the Riverdale gang.) "Outside of getting a good 'gag,' " the reporters said, "Bob is never so happy as when he's riding on his tractor or driving his Model 'T' Ford, which is an exact replica of Archie's car." At least before Archie traded it in for a Mustang.

Thanks to clipping contributor George Manoogian, who teaches English at Haverhill.

I want to say thank you to all you readers, fans, and collectors for the many rewards you have given me. Because of you, the past 50 years I have spent enjoying every minute at my drawing table have the days I spend at comics conventions meeting many of you added to them.

In July I went to the San Diego International con with Lindy, my lovely wife, and was honored beyond any possible dream. The Inkpot Award was given to me. That gold statue mounted against a black marble-like background takes my breath away when I gaze at it. I thank you all for that honor.

But that wasn't all! The next night the American Association of Comic Book Collectors had a dinner in my honor, added me to their Hall of Fame, and gave me a special plaque to accompany my Inkpot plaque. When I admire those two plaques on the wall leading to my studio, memories will surely be aroused of those fantastic days and nights in San Diego when I met and shook hands with so many of you.

I hope to meet many more of you fans, collectors, writers, editors, publishers, and fellow artists, as I travel about attending the conventions. It's most inspiring meeting you all.

Bruce Costa

After due consideration, I now realize that I had the pleasure of attending the most enjoyable panel ever in 10 San Diego Comic Cons. It was the voice actors' panel, featuring Gregg Berger (Mysterio, Mole Man, Garfield, "Kelsey Grammer"), Lucille Bliss (Crusader Rabbit, Smurfette, 101 Dalmatians, Anastasia), Rob Paulsen (Pinky, Mask, TMNT's Rafael, Hadji, Mighty Max), Maurice Le Marche (The Brain, The Real Ghostbusters' Egon, all celebrities on The Critic, Capt. Simian's Solitsky, Ed Wood's Orson Welles, and the best Captain Kirk I've ever heard), Joe Alaskey ("Mel Blanc II": Tweety, Sylvester, Yosemite Sam, and Foghorn Leghorn; Plucky, Casper's Stinky, Rugrats' Grandfather, Forrest Gump's Nixon), and, more to the point, Mark Evanier as moderator.

It's not just that the panelists were amazing. (And they were. I actually welled up inside during one of Gregg Berger's well-oiled performances. "Give me zandwich!" Ya shoulda been there!) Mark starkly contrasted the norm of San Diego panel moderation. He started on time, knew his panelists and their careers, was well-armed with great questions, was flexible enough to go on entertaining tangents, entertained audience questions (of which, for the first time in memory, I had none, due to the thoroughness of his questions), and ended 10 minutes early, as required by the con.

It sounds trivial, even silly. But it's frustrating to fly 3000 miles to attend a presentation where Biff the Teen-age Comics Super-Star takes a chair and says, "Hey guys! Thanks for buying my comics! Any questions?" Mark's efforts were infinitely more appreciated due to the caliber of his panel: His selflessness and consideration enable them to shine.

Bravo.

This letter is written in response to many things I've seen in CBG over the past few months but will only touch on a few simple subjects, the misperceptions that many have in regard to what is happening in this little field that we all love so much.

First, concerning the subjects of costs and formats: Simply put, it is not a real issue. A 25¢ increase in cover price covers the increase in production cost to make the step up from newsprint to the next better format — yielding the 10¢ rise in revenue necessary for the publisher. I, for one, prefer the better paper; the color issue is, of course, a whole other matter. Check the pricing with the actual printers of comics.

On the subject of marketing: Comics have pretty much since their inception relied on their mere existence to market themselves, never taking into account the changing dynamics of the marketplace or society in general. It's been a good four decades since this medium was marginalized as a children's medium. And, contrary to prevailing notions, it doesn't matter

50 ASSORTED STAR TREK GENE RODDENBERRY SETS

Way back in the beginning Star Trek was struggling to get onto the airwaves. T.V. networks and stations could not understand the concept in words. Gene Roddenberry took to presenting pictures on mini-cards to the T.V. stations in his promotional mailings and thus created a unique 19 set 504 card collectible card set. Produced from about 1973-1987 or so, each set had only one very small printing (as Magill Barrett Roddenberry) states. The pictures were taken on the set by Gene himself, showing various phases of each production, including himself, costumes, creatures (some that made it and some that did not). Each set is 16 cards long and there are 19 sets total. Order yours today as we have a very limited supply and they can never be remade as the negatives do not exist anymore!

how many products like Maus or Fax from Sarajevo are produced. If non-comics fans never hear of them, it will always remain a world of comics readers and non-comics readers, instead of simply readers. It all comes down to that simple point of poor public perception and no real marketing beyond our incestuous little community. I could go on and on about this subject, such as how the pricing issues mentioned above are slowly killing the industry from within while keeping outsiders out, but I won't — in this letter.

Finally, let me chime in on the recently discussed subject of trying to break into the business. I tried for a bit more than five years to do so — I even blew a fabulous opportunity extended me by Cat Yronwode, the only pro besides the late, great Neal Posner to treat me fairly and with respect.

A bit of background: Yronwode wished to put me in touch with P. Craig Russell, my personal comics god, saying she'd never seen anyone ink his work so well, that I inked Russell like Russell inks himself. High praise, indeed!

Also at that con, Posner was sufficiently impressed with the fact that I work in a variety of styles — from "tiny toons" to butt-stompin' super-heroes to Wrightsonesque "fine" graphics, that he said he felt, in his words, "there's got to be work for you," that nobody in the field really does this multiple-styles thing, and that he wished more did. Returning home from that ego-pumping con, I was promptly dumped by the woman I thought I'd soon marry, which is 90% of the reason I blew those great opportunities.

Yronwode made no promises; she just said that she'd try to put me in touch with Russell, saying that he needed an assistant at the time. For this, I thank her, never previously having done so. The point here? That it is quite often the fault of us wannabes that we aren't.

Which brings me to the flip side of this issue: There's also an utter lack of professionalism on the part of those in the industry. I've been asked to do spec work several times — once some 30-odd pages of character sheets — and, having done so in the specified time and style, never even received so much as a reply one way or the other from the editor who asked for it. I've had editors at cons tell me rudely and cruelly that my work stunk.

The same portfolio that Yronwode and Posner said they liked so much was savaged by some other editors at the same show. Do I have a point here? Yes. If you really want to make it, you have to keep trying; just like the rest of life, it's not necessarily fair, but it can be done.

Me, I'll (finally) be self-publishing in mid-1998. That's my solution, but I'll never give up on this art form that I love so much, and, as with all the other issues that our field is facing, I hope the rest of you, no matter what your particular interests, don't either.

Just in case it's not clear in my first point above; it was while researching how to publish my own work that I learned of the fallacies of pricing and formats. My comic book will be a 40- or 48-page black-and-white, priced at $3.25 —30¢ more than a typical 24-page black-and-white, but with at least 36 pages of story and art, and, yes, it will be marketed beyond the usual venues. I'll be doing my part. Will you?

P.S. When is CBG going to make Oh, So? available to e-mail, so I don't have to drive myself nuts trying to figure out how Word 97 works?

I just returned from the Chicago Comicon and had a very enjoyable weekend. Highlights for me included meeting Frank Miller and Jeff Smith and seeing again Mark Waid, Peter David, and Jerry Ordway. Ordway is actually the reason I am writing. I spoke with him regarding his fantastic Power of Shazam! comic book. To me, this is one of the most fun comics DC publishes. I asked Ordway how the book was doing, and he said it isn't doing well. Needless to say, this was very discouraging news to me (and to the flock of fans surrounding Ordway).

Power of Shazam! represents everything that the industry is in need of these days: a light, fun series, usually with self-contained stories that kids and adults can both enjoy. Everybody I know who buys the comic book absolutely loves it. And just because it's been around for more than two years doesn't mean the older issues are difficult to acquire. A friend of mine purchased nearly every back issue (and there are 30 issues so far) at the show for less than $20.

For years, I've read fan letters lamenting the fact that such-and-such a title was canceled. Readers talk about how their favorite comics are no longer being published. Well, folks, Power of Shazam! could very well be canceled — unless we do something about it now. If you're currently buying PoS, invest in one extra copy. (I'm going to). That extra can be given away to a friend who doesn't get the comic book. Or distributed as Halloween treats this October. Power of Shazam! is very suitable for children. It's the people out there who don't buy this comic book that we need to reach, though.

If you like Kurt Busiek's Astro City, if you enjoyed Untold Tales of Spider-Man, then this comic book is for you. If you enjoyed Jerry Ordway's great runs on Superman, All-Star Squadron, Infinity Inc., or Wild Star, his Shazam stuff is even better. If you trust Maggie's reviews, try this comic book; she gave it very positive notices.

I'm very saddened that it apparently is not a money-maker. It should (and it could) be, especially with Captain Marvel's upcoming JLA membership. More fans are sure to notice the comic book. Marvel Comics recently axed Untold Tales of Spider-Man, another low-selling comic book with a similar feel. I hope that wasn't a foreshadowing of Shazam's cancellation.

So, please, help me out here. I don't want to lose this fantastic comic book. Help save The Power of Shazam!

Thank you for the very flattering profile in CBG #1235. However, there is one glaring error that I must correct.

I am quoted as saying that I am up for more Eisner Awards than any other creator this year. That is far from the truth, as there are many others with more nominations: Kurt Busiek, Mark Waid, James Robinson, and Neil Gaiman.

I may have been referring to an article on the awards which appeared in The Comics Journal #195, which stated that I received "the most nominations for a writer/artist." However, they were mistaken also, as my good buddy and Akiko creator, Mark Crilley, also received four nominations.

I am tired of hearing about Superman's new costume, the death of Hal Jordan, how bad the new Batman movie is, and how terrible the new Superman movie is going to be. Bob Keeshan is a real person, and I would like to extend my thanks to Peter David for letting this reader know what is being done to the one-and-only Captain Kangaroo.

If there is to be a new Captain, he should be chosen by Keeshan. Perhaps someone who has had a history in children's television or Captain Kangaroo itself, such as Dennis (I still remember him, and other children liked him, as well). He should be trained by Keeshan and eventually the mantle should be turned over to him. The very idea that the people responsible for The Power Rangers are going to bring us a young, hip Captain for the '90s proves that they have no business tampering with a multi-generational tradition.

I watched Captain Kangaroo since before I can remember. My mother watched the Captain when she was a child. Will my unborn son soon be watching a Captain who has no ties with the original? Those are some very large shoes to fill. I hope that, whoever he is, he does not take this station lightly. The only thing I did not like about the column was the fact that there was no address provided to send Saban letters telling them how we feel. Give us an address so that we can tell them that a Captain Kangaroo without Keeshan borders on fraud. A better name might be Captain Kanga-Who? I also hope you will print an address so that the thousands of us who grew up on Captain Kangaroo can tell the Captain how much we appreciate his decades of dedication to children's television. Maybe some dedicated individual might start a website dedicated to the Captain. Celebrities such as Bill Cosby (who worked with Keeshan in the past) might also offer their support.

Bob Keeshan is a national treasure. Surely, there is a network that deals in children's programming that would be proud to feature a show associated with Bob Keeshan. Maybe Nickelodeon.

One final thing in closing: It seems to be a favorite pastime of many in the industry to slam Rob Liefeld. Maybe no one else remembers how boring the New Mutants were for the most part of their 100-issue run: boring powers, lousy costumes, generic personalities. Then Rob began drawing and co-plotting the book. He even made Cannonball into a cool character (something not achieved by any previous artist, including Bill Sienkiewicz and Art Adams). He introduced exciting such new characters as Cable and Deadpool, both of which now have ongoing series from Marvel. He did take a lot of time to produce his Youngblood comics, but the art was some of Liefeld's best and well worth the wait.

Now all we hear is how horrible his version of Captain America was and how terrible he draws. No offense to the artists who are not impressed with his work, but the fact is that, if Liefeld pencils a comic book, it sells. If there are two covers to an issue of Cable or X-Force, Liefeld's disappears first. From what I have heard from retailers, sales of Captain America doubled when Rob came on. Fans could not care less if his art is anatomically correct. All they know is that it looks cool.

I haven't liked everything that Rob Liefeld has done, but some of it, I thought, was great. If nothing else, he should get a little respect for helping lead the way for others to try their hand at creator-owned projects.

Maybe it is just as well that Liefeld is back at his own company. Now he can put out the comics he wants to, and the only people he answers to are the fans: the ones who have been in his corner from the beginning.

As for colleagues, many prominent creators who have worked with him in the past don't seem to have a problem with him. Alan Moore, Ian Churchill, and Jeff Matsuda are doing some their best work and releasing it through Awesome Entertainment. I would like to wish Liefeld all the luck and prosperity he deserves. Keep 'em coming.

In his letter in Oh, So? in #1238, Ali T. Kokmen mentions the scene in the movie The Lost World in which Jeff Goldblum's mathmetician character cites Heisenberg's Uncertainty Principle.

I remember that scene and I also recall my reaction to it: The screenwriter(s) wanted to mention the observer effect and possibly meant to cite the Hawthorne effect. (Hey, "Heisenberg" and"Hawthorne" both start with H!)

As your editorial response notes, complementarity refers to observation at the atomic level. The observer effect encompasses a problem discovered in ethnographic and sociological studies: If people know that they are being observed, they tend to behave differently than they would if they were unobserved. For example, they may behave or describe their behavior in ways they think will please the observers. (Another potential observer effect comes from any biases the observers themselves might have.)

The Hawthorne effect, named after a series of worker studies done at AT&T's Hawthorne Works in Illinois, describes an improvement in performance due to the awareness of being observed. In the Hawthorne experiments, line workers were moved to another room and told they were being studied under various conditions to see what working changes might improve output. The researchers were also interested in how changing working conditions might affect the workers' morale. The workers' morale increased dramatically simply because they had been singled out as subjects, regardless of the other changes in working conditions, and output went up under all conditions as a result. This phenomenon is the Hawthorne effect.

I'll grant you that the Hawthorne effect wouldn't have been a correct citation either, since dinosaurs are not people and the dinosaurs would not necessarily be pleased at being watched by humans. A simple reference to the observer effect

I remember the Batman and Superman cartoons on Sesame Street. They were inserted like the other "commercials" on the show ("... brought to you by the letter ... and the number ..."). The heroes solved crimes via math and reading skills. I recall an episode featuring Lex Luthor. The animation style was like that of the Filmation studio, but I'm not positive about its actual involvement.

I vividly remember when I was 5 and a woman told my mother about this new show called Sesame Street. I was loyal to Captain Kangaroo, until the woman mentioned that Batman was on the new show. So I started watching just for those toons, little knowing that I was actually learning in the process. Since this was before Big Bird, Mr. Hooper, and The Muppets became household names, I suspect that inclusion of the World's Finest team was also a ratings ploy.

The cartoons wasn't shown as much after the first season, though the show did rerun them in the mid-'70s. By then, Sesame Street was running live-action film of Fonzie and Ritchie counting and saying the alphabet (Happy Days, at the time, was a top-rated show; who says PBS can't market itself like a regular network?)

[In the earliest days of the show, there was more content from other sources than Children's Television Workshop. Beatles songs and the like were more prevalent, too, until Joe Raposo compiled an ever-increasing backlog of musical numbers for the series.]

If, as put forth in CBG #1236, women represent only 10% of the comics-buying public, it will take more than publication of a few girls' titles to bring girls and women back into the comics market in force. I started reading comics 10 years ago when in college, when a housemate left copies of The Fabulous Furry Freak Brothers lying around.

I started buying comics when I sent to Rip Off Press for its catalog and saw titles like Wimmen's Comix by female cartoonists. I eyed that title for a while before buying some issues, but, once I did, I was hooked. I started collecting comics when I purchased an introductory special package from Last Gasp: five or so "women's comix" for $10. Now I take great joy in an ever-expanding collection of underground comics by women artists.

What it will take to get women back into the comics market is for every level of the comics industry to get involved. The following are suggestions for how to get me spending more disposable income on comics:

Writers and publishers: If you simply must do a violent warrior woman, have her take on some causes that women care about. How about a superhero who battles sexism in the workplace, storming companies and cracking heads of sexual harassers? There would be steady employment for a tough female who defends women's clinics against anti-choice terrorists. I would pay money to see a woman get the better of good ol' boys issue after issue. Don't think these are compelling enough ideas? Then explain the popularity of Hothead Paisan, Homicidal Lesbian Terrorist.

Artists: Get a clue as to what a woman's body really looks like. Do you think 42DDDD breasts actually hold themselves up? Not on any planet under the influence of gravity! And they don't go with a size 6 waist and, in real life, they're pretty inconvenient for an active lifestyle. (Companies don't make sports bras that large.)

Retailers: Get knowledgeable about titles about, by, and for women and start stocking them regularly — even featuring them prominently. Listen seriously when I tell you what I like to read and quit trying to steer me toward R. Crumb. If you act as if a woman is some sort of oddity in your store, I'll pick up on that real fast, and I won't be back.

Industry publications like CBG need to regularly include comics of interest to the other 51%, not just in occasional special issues. This means wider coverage of underground and independent comics.

I am cheered by the fact that it is harder to keep up with comics by women, especially these days with all the self-published and smallpress titles. However, I see with apprehension that my regular mail-order sources for comics — publishers including Fantagraphics, Last Gasp, and Kitchen Sink — are providing more and more T&A in overwhelming amounts.

Regrettably, after 10 years as a devoted customer, last year I requested that Rip Off Press remove my name from their mailing list. Its catalog offered so many titles with female characters whose mammoth breasts seemed to be their most compelling feature, and the women's interest section seemed to grow smaller with every catalog. And they haven't published a new issue of Wimmen's Comix for five years.

Paul Mellete's letter in CBG #1238 put it aptly: "... the comics market has been defined by superhero and warrior women who are a) scantily clad, b) grotesquely illustrated, and c) ultra-violent." I look forward to the time when I can walk into a comic-book store and find that at least half the store appeals to me, instead of the scant handful of titles currently available.

P.S. Had it been up to me, the comic book pictured on the cover of CBG #1236 would have been Action Girl, edited by Sarah Dyer.

[A cover bringing up a theme for a specific issue doesn't mean comics that fit the theme are ignored in other issues. There's no way to count the number of comics we've covered that are designed to appeal to female readers. Moreover, there are countless more comics that can and do appeal to female readers without such a targeted design. Moreover moreover, some scantily clad and even violent female characters may appeal to female readers — once they get past preconceptions about appearances.

In fact, that is at once the disadvantage and the advantage: Many women readers tend to be turned off by surface appearances of many female characters; many women readers enjoy getting beneath surface appearances to true character traits and motivations. But many of those latter readers will most often reject a comic book out of hand if they're turned off by, say, gravity-defying inflated chests.

It would help if more of today's artists studied the work of, say, Gray Morrow. He draws chesty women, but invariably he draws with a knowledge of both gravity and anatomy.]

Newstandings. None of us need more places to spend money. . And you probably don't need me to give you any ideas, either. But, public-spirited wight that I am, I'm going to, anyhow.

I get more magazines than I can hope to read. Magazines and newspapers. Regularly, my mailbox is crammed with The Comics Journal, Cartoonist PROfiles, Comics Buyer's Guide, and The CAPS Newsletter — not to mention The New Yorker, Newsweek, and the daily newspaper. I try to get through these. Mostly, I give 'em a look and a promise. I also get a few new magazines, freshly minted publications that maybe you don't know about. And they're worth a look.

• Cartoonist and Comic Artist Magazine (CCAM). Edited and published by Marty Jones, this tidy package has been coming out quarterly and reached the ninth issue before Jones had to declare a temporary hiatus.

Initially called The Aspiring Cartoonist, Jones changed the name with #8 because "many cartoonists commented that the title of the publication was misleading: They figured it addressed a level somehow beneath them." The new title more accurately reflects Jones' interests and the content of the magazine. It is unabashedly addressed to cartoonists, young and old, new and experienced. And it aggressively examines and discusses professional cartooning in all its manifestations. In #7, for instance, the focus was on gag cartooning.

Jones assembled interviews and articles on several gag cartoonists (Art Bouthillier, Randy Glasbergen, Ted Goff, George Jartos, Bob Mankoff, Bart Roosendaal in Holland, and George Trosley in a round robin of questions and answers; Dave Coverly, with his syndicated Speed Bump, and Steve Pettinga, cartoon editor for The Saturday Evening Post).

In addition to discussing the techniques of humor and drawing, the cartoonists commented on various business and bookkeeping practices. And Glasbergen even offered these encouraging words: "Contrary to most claims, markets are not disappearing. They're just changing form. When the automobile replaced the horse and buggy, transportation did not disappear; it just changed form. Same with cartooning. You just have to be open to all the possibilities. There's print and electronic publishing, self-publishing on the Internet, CD-ROMs, shirts, books, comic books, animation, computer graphics, special-interest publications — so many possibilities."

Glasbergen, by the way, once said that you needed to keep 2000 cartoons circulating through the mail in order to expect to make a living at it. He was doing just that at the time; this was before he had a syndicated newspaper panel.

Most issues include fairly nuts-and-boltsy stuff on computerized cartooning. Issue #9 offers a piece on insurance for cartoonists; #7, what cartoonists should know about the law. And there are interviews with the rich and famous, too. Meanwhile, in the last issue of Cartoonist and Comic Artist Magazine (the aforementioned #9), editor Jones reports on his visit to Paws Inc. in central Indiana. The impressive thing about Garfield Command Central is that there is virtually no staff turnover. People love working there. More than 60 of them.

Impressive, as I say. An exceedingly professional production on all counts. And back issues are still available. Inquire at P.O. Box 80204, Indianapolis, IN 46280. Meanwhile, we'll hope for CCAM's speedy return to a regular publication schedule.

• Indy Magazine focuses assiduously on comics produced by small-press entrepreneurs and self-published cartoonists, previewing dozens of publications and interviewing the people who concoct them. In #15, for instance, we have an interview with Batton Lash, who has been producing a peculiar comic strip called Wolff & Byrd, Counselors of the Macabre for 18 years! (Surprised me, too.)

In person, Lash is one of the most charming and talented and intelligent of cartoonists, just exactly the sort of fellow you'd like to spend an evening over dinner and drinks with. On paper in Wolff & Byrd, he directs the action of the rarest comic strip in publication: Wolff and her partner take vampires and werewolves as clients, defending their rights with the same vigor as any defense team devotes to its clients.

The strip began in September 1979 in the weekly newspaper The Brooklyn Paper. Before the launch of the strip, Lash did advertising and spot illustration for the paper. And he also delivered the paper (a more remunerative endeavor than his art, he said) up and down Court Street, where scores of law firms had their offices. Lash thought if he did a comic strip about lawyers, he'd get instant attention from this subscriber base.

"I noticed that some of the buildings were very old and funky-looking — some were gothic — and I would go from the top floor down to the lobby and I'd take the stairs and do every floor. Some of them looked spooky, moody — that type of thing. I wanted to do a humorous strip and I wanted to make it fun and goofy. So I thought, "Wouldn't it be funny if the lawyers represented monsters?" As I went up and down those stairs, I'd imagine seeing through the frosted glass the image of a werewolf howling and the lawyers calming it, saying, 'Don't worry — you've got 28 days until the next full moon.' " Since 1979, Lash has seen his strip taken up by The National Law Journal and CBG. And a couple years ago, he started publishing Wolff and Byrd's adventures in comic-book form.

Indy has just gone from a comic-book-size format to a magazine-size format with #16, which contains Jim Wheelock's report on his visit to the Festival International de la Bande Dessinée, the annual comics convention in Angoulême every January. It also has interviews with Evan Dorkin, Adrian Tomine, Bob Fingerman, and Rob Walton.

Published six times a year, Indy offers subscriptions at $13: 611 NW 34th Dr., Gainsville, FL 32607. Another thoroughly professional-looking production.

• Comic Book Marketplace is up to #46 at this writing. (Probably up to an even higher number by the time this sees print.) Billing itself as "the magazine for Golden Age and Silver Age collectors," CBM is perhaps the most "fannish" of the magazines I'm examining here. Some of its articles are simply a collector's reminiscences about comic books of his youth or about his collection. But recent issues have started delving deeper into the four-color realms of yesteryear.

The real meat of every issue lately has been an interview with a stellar personality in the comic-book industry. Issues #38 and #39, for instance, carried a two-part interview with Will Eisner and others associated with the Eisner-Iger shop and with the early days of Eisner's Spirit endeavors. Eisner has been interviewed before — endlessly. But I've not seen elsewhere the coupling of his remarks with those of other cartoonists who knew him "when."

This article was particularly fascinating for the glimpses it offered into the working methods of shop production and the personalities of such Golden Age greats as Lou Fine, who is recalled and described by several of those whose remarks compose this article. In addition to Eisner, interviewer Peter Depree recorded conversations with Tex Blaisdell, Dave Berg, Jules Feiffer, Al Jaffee, Alex Kotzky, Joe Simon, and Joe Kubert.

Issue #40 features an interview with Neal Adams, who discusses his years with DC; #41 offers a capsule history of American horror comic books and a delightful review of the life and history of Sheldon Mayer's Scribbly, the boy cartoonist; and #42's cover story is "the genius of Joe Kubert." In the same issue, Mike Brandenburg discusses the most collectible issues of comic books with Bugs Bunny in them, and Michelle Nolan writes about how few old comic-book titles reached #100.

Among each issue's regular features is an eight-page color section that reproduces in color the covers of classic comics being discussed elsewhere in the issue.

I'm only scratching the surface here, you understand. The magazine has become increasingly informative lately and, therefore, entertaining to those who are not avid collectors but are nonetheless devoted students or fans of the medium.

Published monthly by Stephen Geppi's Gemstone Publishing Inc., the magazine is clearly intended to stimulate interest in buying and collecting old comics but, in so doing, it provides us all with pretty nifty nuggets about golden oldies. (And there is no evidence of the "price guide" mentality that generated the disastrous speculators' market of a few years ago.) Subscriptions are $60 for 12 issues, P.O. Box 180900, Coronado, CA 92178.

• And if you're a Jack Kirby fan, you'll want to subscribe to The Jack Kirby Collector. This mag has been growing and improving steadily since it started 11 issues ago. It now boasts full-color front and back covers, and #11 had 42 interior pages which offered articles on Stuntman, the ideas Kirby had for movies, a comparison of New Gods and Star Wars, Kirby's version of The Prisoner, and an examination of Kirby's last years in animation.

One of the great bonuses of each issue is a generous sampling of Kirby art, often unpublished material — and including many reproductions of his pencils before being inked. Had I started my subscription to this magazine before I wrote the chapter on Kirby for that book of mine (The Art of the Comic Book), I'd have been even more convinced that his was the storytelling genius that shaped and informed the Marvel universe. There are also great interviews with those with whom Kirby worked. Produced by John Morrow, JKC comes out six times a year; subscriptions at $24 are available from TwoMorrows Advertising, 502 Saint Mary's St., Raleigh, NC 27605.

Elves at the gate

My taste in comics doesn't run toward elves as a rule. The usual assortment of prejudices (too cartoony, too light-hearted and touchy-feely) have kept me from joining Elfquest's legion of loyal readers. There are good reasons, however, that the series has hooked the readers it has and has lasted for nearly 20 years. Over the years, it has developed a rich history of character relationships, events, and traditions, which allow it to tell actual stories without recourse to 20-page brawls.

Because it has strong appeal to readers who don't normally read comic books, it is important to the comics industry as a rare doorway into the field for potential new readers. As a non-regular, I checked out Elfquest #14 ($4.95, Warp Graphics) to see how easily I could step into the series' continuity. A 12-page preface reprinted from CBG filled readers in on the 25-year history of Richard and Wendy Pini's creative and personal partnership, but no such recap brought me up to date on any of the three ongoing serials featured in the issue. Each chapter was clearly speaking to the series' cult of regulars and filled with references that baffled an uninitiated reader like me. That's fine for longtime Elquesters, but, because of the title's gatekeeper role for the comics field, the Pinis need to remember to keep the door open and the light on for readers who might not otherwise pick up another comic book.

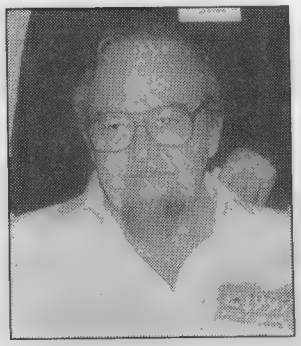
Still Thursday, July 17 — When we ran out of space last week, we were at the San Diego Con the first day, and I was making my way around the hall. This is going to take a while so I hope you're wearing comfortable shoes.

Mark Evanier

Over in Artists' Alley, there was a wonderful moment: Stan Lee and his charming spouse, Joan, walked by, and there, all clustered together, were Marie Severin, Dick Ayers, Jim Mooney, and George Tuska. All these folks worked with Stan in Marvel's glory days and he hadn't seen a couple of them in a decade or so, so there was much embracing and a joyous reunion. It all made for an immense Group Hug, the likes of which we hadn't seen since the last episode of The Mary Tyler Moore Show.

"I asked Jim Mooney which of his 8000 credits he was most asked about. Depending on when you started reading comics, he could be the guy who drew your first Batman, your first Supergirl, your first Spider-Man."
— Mark Evanier



Jim Mooney

As if they could sense the event, a bevy of fans with cameras converged, and about 8000 photos were taken. (Stan kept pointing to me and saying, "I'm counting on you to see that I get copies, Evanier" so if you took one of them, would you send me some prints to pass on?)

Jim Mooney brought me a lovely treat: The original art to the first Pussycat story he drew for Marvel. Pussycat was a strip that ran for a time in the '60s in some of the men's magazines that were published by the same company that published Marvel comics. There was also one magazine, Adventures of Pussycat, that collected and reprinted some of the stories.

Pussycat was a wide-eyed, wide-chested young lady who won the hearts of many while losing most of her apparel — kind of a factory-second Little Annie Fanny, only in black-and-white and with more clothing. The strip was considered racy at the time but today it wouldn't raise a sweat on Donald Wildmon's upper lip. You can find more flesh now in your average super-hero funnybook. Mooney did a splendid job in the best tradition of "Good Girl" art.

Stan wrote the first few, drawn by Wally Wood, and then by Mooney, then Larry Lieber took over the scripting. (Bill Ward — the Russ Meyer of comics — drew her after Jim, and I'm told that Bill Everett did a few, though I've never seen them.)

I couldn't resist: I showed it to Stan and tried to convince him that, long after Spider-Man, The X-Men, and The Hulk are forgotten, people will remember him for his work on Pussycat. He seemed somehow unconvinced.

For most of the con, I couldn't amble over to that side of Artists' Alley without seeing Dick, Jim, George, Marie, Sheldon Moldoff, Ramona Fradon, and a few other "seasoned pros" surrounded by fans. Eavesdrop and you'd invariably hear the fans ticking off lists of their favorite works by that person.

Dick Ayers was braced by a young man who persisted in listing his favorite issues of Sgt. Fury and His Howling Commandos — stories that Dick no longer recalled, but this reader did. George Tuska was being told about Iron Man tales from his past and being quizzed on his time with Eisner-Iger and with Charles Biro. Ramona Fradon was interrogated about Metamorpho and Aquaman, while Shelley Moldoff was queried about Batman and Hawkman.

I asked Jim Mooney which of his 8000 credits he was most asked about. Depending on when you started reading comics, he could be the guy who drew your first Batman, your first Supergirl, your first Spider-Man. (He drew the Tommy Tomorrow story in the first super-hero type comic book I ever read — Action Comics #250.)

"I think Supergirl," he said. "Most people remember my Supergirl."

I asked him how many have mentioned Pussycat.

He said none. "Hey, Stan didn't even remember Pussycat."

Along with the fan-type questions came fan-type purchases. All these fine artists were selling original art — often at a brisk clip — and some were accepting commissions for special drawings. In fact, from what I could tell, a certain number of people came to the con particularly to meet Dick or George or Jim or Ramona or Shelley or Marie — or one of several others — and to purchase a keepsake sketch or page. I sure couldn't leave without a memento of each.

One of the few other things I got at the con — and, lucky me, it was a gift — was the fourth issue of Innocent Bystander, a wonderful little publication wholly created (and published) by a brilliant gent named Gary Sassaman. I'm not sure if it's a comic book or a fanzine. Whichever, it's a fresh, highly personal look at topics that interest Gary, most of which interest me and will likely interest you.

One of these days, I'm going to get around to a full-fledged column of plugs for comics I like — like Blackjack and Usagi Yojimbo and all of Jim Hudnall's Halloween Comics (Espers, Age of Heroes) and Doctor Wonder and oh-so-many others. Right now though, I'd like to suggest taking a peek at Innocent Bystander. If your favorite funnybook facility doesn't carry it, badger it. If it still doesn't respond, order Innocent Bystander direct from Gary Sassaman at 121 Academy Ave., #2, Pittsburgh, PA 15228. They're $3 each or all four for 10 bucks. (If you can only sample one, tell him to send you the one about the Marx Brothers.)

Wandering the aisles, I found myself overhearing complaints. One gent, about age 25, was complaining that there were fewer scantily clad women around than the previous few years. I would hear this lament a few more times before Sunday and I'm not sure it's a bad trend.

But when I mentioned this to a writer friend, I found myself accused of censorship, which is a little like accusing Captain America of being pro-Nazi.

For years now, I've been a big supporter of the Comic Book Legal Defense Fund. For that matter, I've also been a big supporter of scantily clad women. One of these days, I must enumerate here the reasons. (The reasons I support the CBLDF, that is. The reasons I support scantily clad women should be obvious.)

But it's not censorship to suggest there's a time and place for everything. Last year, it made me a tad uncomfy to see Carnal Comics so close to the Archie booth. There were small children at this convention — or, at least, there should be; they are part of our market. A parent, I thought, ought to be able to take their kids over to meet Betty and Veronica without having to circumvent Hyapatia Lee. (Did Archie even have a display this year? If not, did that have anything to do with it?) I think the Fantagraphics folks did a smart thing to arrange their display of adult comics the way they did.

Then a dealer accosted me and griped, like I could do something to change this, that he wasn't selling anything. The con had been open a whopping four hours and he was already in despair that he might not make back his expenses.

I suppose he wanted me to carry his beef to these pages but, as I surveyed his wares, it all seemed to me like a table full of esoteric junk that no one could possibly want. And, just in case someone did want it, he had it all sticker-priced such that Bill Gates would need to stop by the Money Store to make a purchase.

Being a polite cuss, I gently suggested that he reconsider his offerings and what he was charging for them. Sunday afternoon, I passed his table again, and he smugly informed me that he was darn near sold out and hadn't dropped any of his prices beyond normal haggling range. This shows you why I am not a dealer.

One aisle over, a wanna-be writer stopped me and wailed that he couldn't get anyone in power to read a submission he had brought for a new comic book. I told him that a con is not a great place to make this happen — that anyone with hiring power is usually besieged with pitches and job talk and that they didn't have the time to sit down, read a proposal, and give it a fair evaluation, nor should they be expected to lug them home.

"That's what they're here for," he said, raising his voice. "They have portfolio review, they look at the samples of new artists. Why can't someone look at my concept?" He thrust a copy of it into my hand, and I looked at the cover page. There was the name of the strip and, under it, it said "A propposal for a new era in comics."

Written out just like that. With an extra "p" in "proposal."

I don't know what the new era in comics is going to be, but apparently it isn't going to involve knowing how to spell.

Later, I had to go pick up my car, which had received a battery transplant while I'd been doing the con. Only later did it dawn on me that it would have been cheaper to leave it at the Kearney Mesa Lexus dealership for the duration of the con, rather than take it back and pay for parking at the Marriott.

Oh, well. If I were smarter, I wouldn't be doing this. I'd be teaching at a university or writing computer programs or winning Ben Stein's money or something.

Thursday evening, I enjoyed a nice dinner with most of the same folks from breakfast; then it was my job to make sure Marie Severin and Ramona Fradon made it to the first annual Friends of Lulu Awards Ceremony. There, Marie was announced as the recipient of the first Lifetime Achievement Award. (Smart money is on Ramona to cop the second.)

Friends of Lulu is an organization of increasing importance, re-

Point of View

minding the comic-book community that comics can be bought and read by females. At a time when comic-book sales are hitting record lows, a lot of folks in the business are saying, "Gee, maybe we shouldn't have neglected the girl audience the way we did." The wiser among them might append, "Maybe we shouldn't have assumed that all girls will read is Little Lulu, Archie, and romance comics."

This group challenges us to expand our definition of what comics can be. They can, for example, be more than adolescent power fantasies. They're going to have to be, if they're going to appeal to a wider — i.e., not-male — audience.

(In a post-ceremony conversation, a former Marvel editor made the comment to me that he thought the company was in trouble because it never showed much competence or even interest in that which was not super-heroic. He said, "The trouble with Marvel is they've never understood anything that can't meet Galactus.")

FOL also reminds us that comics can be written and/or drawn by women, as well. Prudently, it's never suggested — because it ain't true — that comics for females have to be created by women or that women can only create comics for females.

Marie Severin, of course, is known for her fine work at Marvel as a colorist and for drawing, among other comics, Hulk, Dr. Strange, Kull, and Sub-Mariner. Her most outstanding works for Marvel went unpublished, however. Her acute sense of humor, coupled with a flair for spot-on caricatures, made her the virtuoso of the office cartoon — acerbic little commentaries, scribbled out on her lunch hour and pinned up in the halls of Marvel for all to enjoy.

During my first visit to Marvel, I howled at a dozen or so of them and suggested that Marvel should ditch the comics and publish her drawings instead. (They had, in a way. The short-lived humor comic book, Not Brand Echh, was largely built around her work. Had it all been as funny as what she tacked up on the walls, it would still be running.)

I met Marie that day and came away with two observations. One was that she was, as everyone had said, one of the nicest folks in all of comics. The other was that, as good as she was at Sub-Mariner — her then-current assignment — she was even better at humor.

I thought of that as I watched Marie step to the podium to receive her plaque and the accompanying standing ovation. She deserved both, of course, but there was a special gravity to her receiving the first Hall of Fame award for Women Cartoonists. During her career, Marie has occasionally been stuck in the job descriptions where women have been too often pigeonholed — coloring, doing "soft" comics like Muppet Babies — but she's also done the kind of comics that were presumed to be man's work: superheroes, barbarians, adventure — the comics that, by default, have been the mainstream over at Marvel.

She hasn't spent her career doing "girl" comics, nor has she done "boy" comics. Marie is someone who has just done comics — and done them well. I would have liked (and still would like) to see more of her "funny" style — but, during that ceremony, that seemed like a minor quibble. As I saw Marie receive the congratulations of all — including many current female cartoonists who didn't have to vault quite as many barricades as she did — it was hard to imagine this award going anywhere but home with her.

Speaking of women doing comics: It was nice to see my longtime pal Carol Lay and her new hubby at the event. I've known Carol since she started as a letterer and watched her segue to inking, then pencilling, then writing, and doing it all on her own. As I recall, it took her about a week to master each phase and move on to the next.

Most of this was on comic books (and also staff work) for Hanna-Barbera. She handled its kind of characters well, but there was a quirky, individual viewpoint and sense of humor lurking there, waiting for just the right moment to burst forth. Finally, it did, and it's now on display in her strip: Story Minute, which you can find in an array of weekly newspapers around the country and in collections from Kitchen Sink Press. I think it's some of the freshest, funniest work around.

Carol was a Guest of Honor at this year's con, which was much deserved, since she's done superlative work — starting the moment she stopped working in someone else's style and found her own.

This is brings us to the end of Thursday. Next week, Friday. Time flies when you're having fun.

I'm Mark Evanier, and my mailing address is 363 S. Fairfax Ave., #303, Los Angeles, CA 90036.

All titles reviewed this week are black and white with color covers.

• Teri Sue Wood has wrapped up her Wandering Star series with #21 (1997, Sirius, $2.50). Here's one of those long graphic stories with beginning, middle, and end — and it's ended! Jeez! Wood is uncommon enough in herself to attract notice: a creator who has plugged away for years and finished a series with a growing audience of admirers. That done, she's going on to her next series: Darklight.

The final issue is packed, with little extraneous material, as Casi concludes the interview through which she relives the traumatic experiences of the interstellar war in which she was a pivotal figure. Wood's science-fiction series shows her clear vision of story and character — and excellent ability to delineate both. She shows what a determined creator can accomplish — but #21 is not a jump-aboard issue, obviously. It will obviously be more accessible collected into trade paperback form.

AS THE SEEKER, YOU HAD AN ADVANTAGE— YOUR EARS WERE TRAINED TO WORK LIKE RADAR—
—AND THE OTHER KIDS COULD NEVER KEEP QUIET ENOUGH.
AS THE HIDER, YOU WEREN'T SO SUCCESSFUL, BUT FOR YOU IT WAS THE MOST IMPORTANT PART OF THE GAME.
THE SIGHTED CHILDREN HAD A SUPER SENSE YOU COULD HARDLY EVEN COMPREHEND—

• The Trespassers #4 and #5 (1997, Amazing Montage, $2.50 each), on the other hand, are designed almost to stand on their own as anthology installments. Amazing Montage (PO Box 18959, Cleveland Heights, OH 44118) describes itself as "the only comic-book company dedicated to the modern mystery genre." Each issue contains a self-contained mystery story written by Joe Zabel and drawn by Zabel (sometimes with Gary Dumm). Issue #5 concludes the continuing back-up feature "Mr. Grey" by Dumm.

Continuing detectives are Ray Fish and Finn Morgan — but the term "detectives" does not quite convey matters. In #5, for example, Finn gets involved simply because she does a Tarot card layout for a blind woman. The art is not knockout work; what is of special interest about The Trespassers is that competently told mysteries are rare in this field, and this series manages it, seemingly without effort. Moreover, it provides a successful example of handling ongoing characters without obsessing on minor changes in how they dress: A series can continue nicely via stories which delineate a variety of characters and then show the impact the series characters have on the one-shot guests. It worked in series like Boy and "The Heap" in the Golden Age. It works here, as with a focus on a character who was blinded as a child.

• Coventry (#3, Jul 97, Fantagraphics, $3.95) is one of those titles which leads its readers to drop everything when a new issue comes in so the next installment can be read immediately. Bill Willingham's fantasy detective series is not for kids (containing occasional graphic yucky scenes) — but the storytelling is clear and offbeat, the art is compelling, and the script is bright and delightful. It is (despite a "previously" notice inside the front cover) not really designed for new readers, but those who have just come across it will find it worth their while to track down the earlier issues.

• Galaxion #1 and #2 (May and July 97, Helicon, $2.75) has been compared by many to Wandering Star. The focal character is female, it's a science-fiction continued series, it's a graphic novel (though one perhaps twice as long as WS), and the character interplay is charmingly handled. However, this seems a bit more influenced by anime. (Writer-artist Tara Jenkins says Starblazers is her biggest anime influence).

The only problem that brings to the work is that there are, so far, eight main characters aboard the Galaxion, the third ship to try an interstellar jump. And the art makes them all look pretty much alike. Add to this that they're all wearing uniforms, and some of the scenes get downright confusing. The reader can just say, "The heck with it," and try to keep track via hairstyles, ignoring whatever isn't clear. But more attention to creating a variety of physical types would have paid off.

On the other hand, Jenkins does provide pictures with character names and job descriptions for her cast: terrific!

It's a story that is well-written, has fun characters, and shows a sense of solid direction. Helicon (178 Jarvis St., #1102, Toronto, Ontario, M5B 2K7, Canada) is a small publisher that could gain a growing audience with this project.

"I dislike censorship. Like an appendix, it is useless when inert and dangerous when active."

— Maurice Edelman (1911-1975)

Some of the best-received of the 300 Tony's Tips! columns I've written have been those concerning the ongoing battle between good, in the form of the Medina County District Library, and evil, in the form of the Christian Coalition. Now, before you reach for the computer, pen, or phone to inform me that I am going to Hell or worse (Cleveland?), let me make a quick confession and a request. Last request and all that.

I confess, and have gone on record saying, that I believe the Christian Coalition is one of the greatest threats to this nation's essential freedoms. Its ultimate goal, in my opinion, is to turn the United States into a fundamentalist theocracy. Since such a theocracy would doubtless burn me at the stake as a witch or, worse, a comic-book columnist, I have a vested interest in fighting it. In short, don't look for me to cut it any slack.

I would request, however, that before you start flicking your Bics at the neatly-piled wood around my bound-and-gagged personage, you take the time to research the Christian Coalition. Check out its history of intolerance, its methods, its well-heeled leaders, its questionable tax-exempt status, and the current federal investigation of same. I suspect that if you do a fraction of the research I've done on these people, you won't be inclined to bring marshmallows to my send-off.

Now that we've established where my head is, and with the caveat that the opinions expressed in this column are those of its author and not necessarily those of Comics Buyer's Guide, its staff, or its advertisers, let's review the battle between good and evil as it stood when last we chatted on the subject.

It started in mid-November 1996, when disgruntled librarian Linda Pesarchick resigned her position as a circulation clerk over the library's acquisition of several items to which she objected, including Howard Stern's Miss America and The New Joy of Gay Sex.

In the local Medina County Gazette, she claimed she had resigned rather than issue such material to juveniles. In other newspapers, she admitted that she objected to anyone having access to the material, but, since that doesn't play nearly as well as the "protecting the children" bit, she has now dropped it from her repertoire. The library accepted her resignation.

"We have to be aware of being the guardians of free speech," said Library Director Bob Smith, "Our policy is that our materials are open to everyone." The position follows guidelines championed by the American Library Association.

No library materials were found to fit the legal definition of pornography or obscenity. But, as we will see, Pesarchick, who has just recently admitted her membership in the Christian Coalition, was hardly concerned about such minutiae. Her resignation was just the opening move in a campaign to demonize the library, its staff, and its supporters — and to allow the Coalition to control access to information on a local level.

A few days later, the Gazette devoted its letters to the editor section to the issue. Medina resident Tony Isabella — gee, that name sounds familiar — wrote: As the parent of two young children, ages 5 and 8, I am in control of their reading and viewing material. I see this as a privilege and a responsibility and would not willing relinquish it to book banners and censors who plague our society.

Pesarchick wrote: Where has our common sense regarding our children gone? Don't forget, we help to fund our library with our tax dollars. This, by the way, is foreshadowing, that well-known mark of literary quality.

(Oh, heck, why keep you in suspense? Especially since I won't be able to cover this in detail until next week. The Coalition has launched a campaign against the library operating levy that goes to the voters this coming November. You know, those people are really bad sports.)

Medina resident Shawn Vallery wrote: And if library board members are not willing to accommodate such a request [to restrict materials], then we need to replace them with responsive public servants who will. Vallery is a Coalition member, albeit one who conceals that membership when it's to her advantage. She ran for the Medina school board last year and was soundly defeated.

Digression. In my experience, Coalition members tend to be "bilingual." They say one thing for public consumption and another when they believe they are among their fellows. Vallery had received the recommendation of the Gazette, which naively said her Coalition ties were not pertinent to the election. Then, at a Coalition-sponsored debate, she talked the Coalition party line, including the usual demonizing of those who disagreed with it, and produced an amazing and completely irrelevant tirade against gays. Her comments were reported in the Gazette. She got her well-heeled butt kicked by the wised-up voters of Medina.

On a personal note, during a public forum on Library issues, Vallery lied to this columnist's face about her membership in the Coalition. She needs to brush up on her Commandments.

One of the reasons the Coalition and its allies are such a threat to our freedoms is because they have so much time on their hands and are committed to using said time to fulfill their various agendas. Debunking their lies and filling in the information they conveniently leave out of their letters and speeches wouldn't leave me, for example, time to earn an living and be a good parent to my own children.

December rolled around, and Pesarchick's supporters wrote reams of letters to the Gazette. I was on the target end of several of those missives.

One reader wrote: To put her in the same context as book banners and censors, as one writer did, is absurd. She simply wants a more workable system in place so parents will be aware of what their children are checking out of the library.

Naturally, the writer made no mention of the already-existing policy that allowed concerned parents to restrict their children's use of library materials. Perhaps because fewer than two dozen of these so-called concerned parents took advantage of it.

Another writer added: A father wrote in the Nov. 18 Gazette that he is in control of his children's reading and viewing materials. Of course he is. They're only 5 and 8 years old. We can't possibly be with our children 100% of the time, especially the ones who are old enough to think of viewing adult material.

Silly old optimist me thought that, if I explained and taught proper values to my kids when they were young, just maybe, as they got older, they could be trusted to make appropriate decisions even when I wasn't with them. Gosh, is my face red!

Paul Vallery, husband of Shawn, wrote claiming "the library's policy violates the state of Ohio's obscenity laws." It was and is a lie, albeit one the Coalition has clung to even in the face of rulings by the county prosecutor that the library has not violated state law in any way, shape, or form.

The library's many supporters didn't remain silent. Granger Township's Beverly Mugrage wrote: In Medina County, one of our greatest assets is our exceptional library system with its large variety of services and its friendly, competent librarians and associates. The excellence of the library is brought home when out-of-town visitors are astounded by the quality and quantity of the services offered by our friendly librarians and when library science students ask about professional openings, hoping to work at our library.

Things got even more interesting when, as part of a statewide program, computers were installed in the library. These computers contained the library's card catalog and allowed patrons to access the Internet for information. Concerns were raised about minors using the computers to view sexual explicit web-sites. To answer these concerns, library board members voted to hold a public forum on the issue.

The next day's Gazette ran an article on the formation of a group called Citizens for Protecting Children. The group was said to have been founded by Medina resident Michelle Yezerski, but the only person interviewed was Debbie Malenock, the chairwoman of the local chapter of the Christian Coalition. At the time, she claimed the group was not actively involved in the library issue.

Was Malenock lying? I guess that would be in the realm of possibility. Former library employee Pesarchick, who generated the initial publicity in this campaign, is a member of the Coalition.

Malenock was the first spokesperson for the group. For a new group, the CPC proved adept at generating publicity for its cause. When questioned about the connection, CPC members denied their group was an offshoot of the Coalition but did say the Coalition had been helping them from day one.

In any case, within days, the Coalition was no longer denying its active involvement in the library situation and, thereafter, was frequently mentioned in media and print reports on the matter, often to the exclusion of the CPC.

Another CPC member was heard from in the Jan. 10 edition of the Gazette: Julie Wojtala, the secretary of what she described as a "grassroots organization." I found that an interesting choice of words, given the group's close ties with the local chapter of the national Christian Coalition.

In her letter to the editor, Wojtala repeated the lie that the library was in violation of Ohio state law. She referred to the American Library Association as "the muscle" behind the library's policies, this being typical of the Coalition's demonization of its enemies. She suggested residents voice their "complaints" to the county prosecutor and attend library board meetings to "vocalize their outrage." Heaven forbid that any concerned citizen might, instead, express their support of the library for standing up for our Constitutional freedoms.

At this point, some of you may be asking why a comics-oriented publication is allowing a columnist to discuss at length what you may not see as a comics-related issue. Perhaps you've missed CBG's coverage of the Planet Comics case in Oklahoma City.

Former Planet Comics owners Michael Kennedy and John Hunter have had their business ruined, their personal lives devastated, and their freedom placed in jeopardy because of a complaint made against them by an unidentified member of the Christian Coalition.

Their crime was to have (not to have openly displayed) adult comics material in their store for sale to adults who requested the material. The state prosecutor has characterized them as "dangerous criminals" and seeks to put them in jail. Their trial is scheduled to begin in September.

This and too many other cases reported in CBG and being fought by the Comic Book Legal Defense Fund make it clear that, like it or not, the comics industry, along with every other form of expression and entertainment, is in a war. Our only chance of winning this war is to know our enemies and know how they operate. That's why I'm devoting this and some upcoming columns to the ongoing situation in my home town of Medina.

Save this column for handy reference. We've got a lot more to cover and we don't have the space to repeat ourselves.

See you next week.

Comics tune in to The Munsters

"The high recognition factor was a big reason to acquire the license."
— Rich Maurizio

By Kevin Cleary
For Destination Entertainment

Cleaver, Ricardo, Cunningham: Television has made a lot of family names famous. On Sept. 24, 1964, CBS introduced viewers to The Munsters and added one more name to pop culture for generations of American families.

The first episode, "Munster Masquerade," launched a franchise that has been loved by millions for more than 30 years. TV Comics! said the run of success enjoyed by Herman, Lilly, Grandpa, Eddie, and Marilyn as the lovable monster family tucked into the heart of suburbia was not lost on them. The first issue of a new Munsters comics series is scheduled to ship in late August, and TV Comics! hired Destination Entertainment to handle the launch and development of its line.

TV Comics! Editorial Director Rich Maurizio said, "In the 1960s The Munsters were a hit prime-time TV show boasting 70 episodes in its two-and-a-half year run. In the '70s the show was syndicated around the world. During the '80s and '90s, it's become a staple of cable programming, running again during prime-time on Nickelodeon.

"The high recognition factor was a big reason to acquire the license. The Munsters are known by kids and adults, both men and women. Launching the company with this property is a sure-fire way to craft a brand image that fans, retailers, and collectors will appreciate right away.

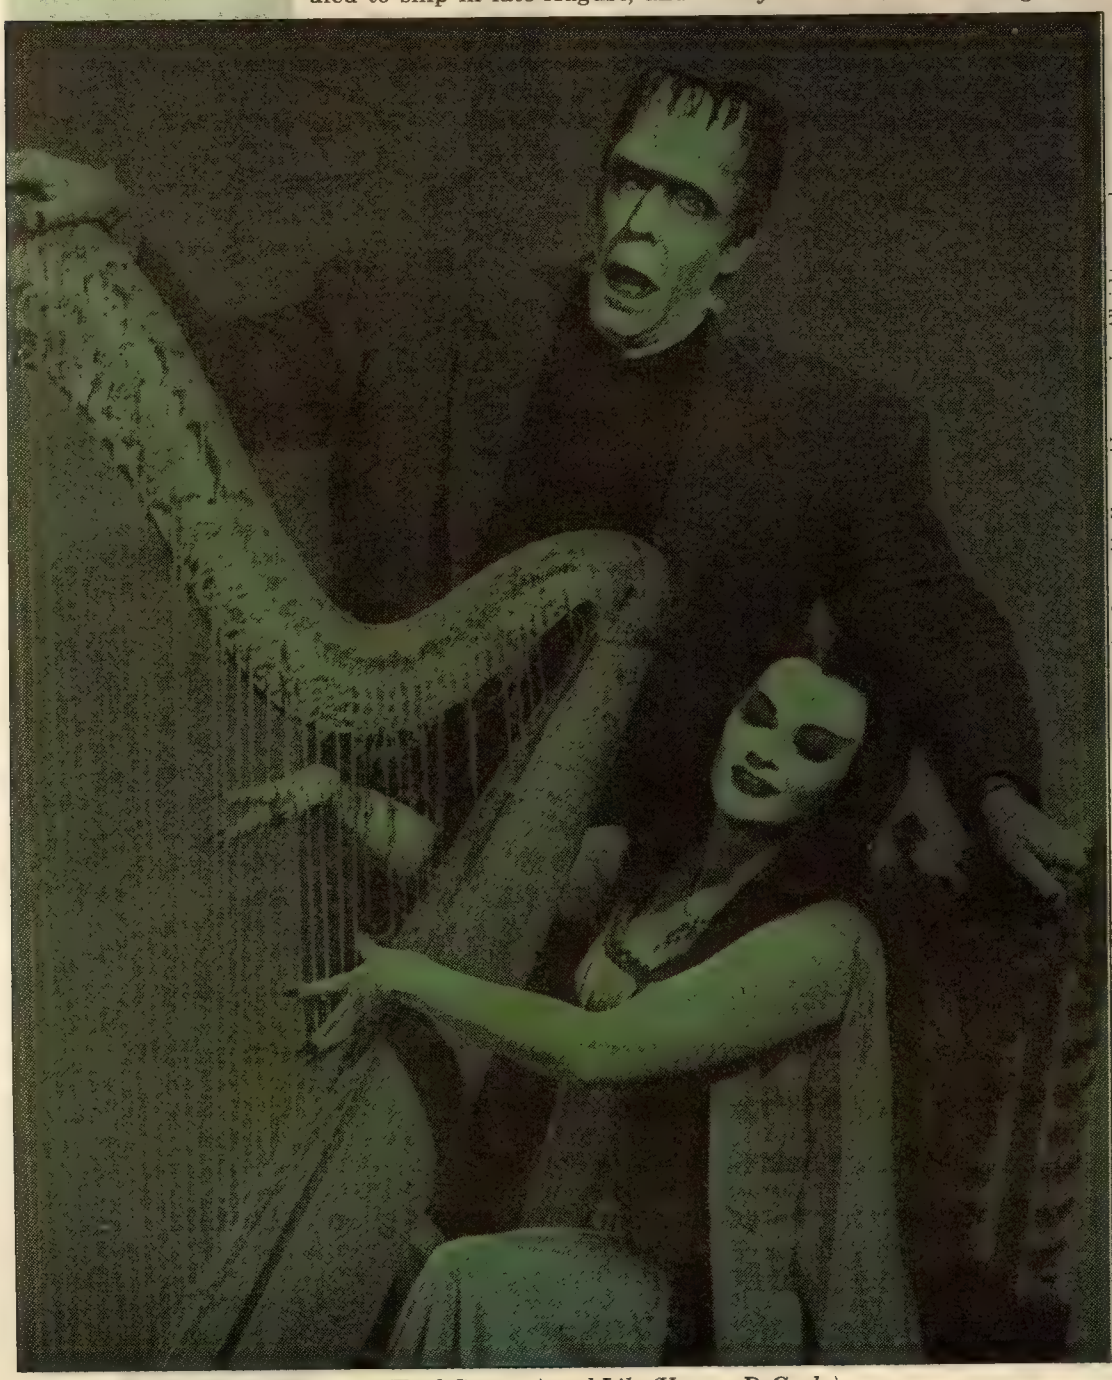
"The other big reason was that our staff has an excellent grasp of the characters and what makes the Munster premise work. The quality of our character designs and our understanding of Herman, Grandpa, etc. were what won the license for us."

Destination Entertainment President Marc Patten said, "The obvious reason for us to seek out The Munsters and other TV shows is that we're also all huge fans, even though none of us grew up during their heyday in the 1960s. Our generation got hooked by watching these classic shows in syndication." He added, "I think the folks at Universal Studios are as excited about this as we are."

It's been a long time since the face of Herman Munster has stared out at the public from the cover of a comic book, but The Munsters will feature photo covers of the wacky cast on every issue, Maurizio said. "I think the comics industry lost a lot of public recognition when Dell/Gold Key and Charlton stopped producing photo covers associated with high-profile TV and movie projects on a regular basis. It gave non-superhero fans a reason to pass the comics rack without a second glance. We hope this makes them do a double-take."

In the new comic book The Munsters still reside at 1313 Mockingbird Lane, but the family is definitely living in the 1990s. Maurizio said, "The Munsters are the same, but the times have changed around them. For instance, in #2, when The Munsters visit New York City, they don't seem to stand out as much when surrounded by punk rockers, metal-heads, and performance artists who inhabit the Big Apple. We are trying to do this with the same sense of fun that was brought to the two recent Brady Bunch movies. Our plans are twofold: update the environment and keep the classic appeal of the characters."

Patten added, "We have no intention of updating the characters as Hollywood has done with many of the classic comedies; McHale's Navy and Leave it to Beaver come to mind. Herman will still be Herman — goofy, childlike, and lovable. Eddie is not going to get an earring and become a slacker.



Herman (Fred Gwynne) and Lily (Yvonne DeCarlo)

Like its Dell predecessor, the new Munsters comic book will have a photo cover on each issue, like this one from issue #1.

The Munsters is a copyright of Kayro-Vue Productions and is a trademark of Universal City Studios, Inc. Licensed by Universal Licensing, Inc. All rights reserved.

Grandpa will continue to blow things up while yelling at Herman in the process. It's the wholesomeness and integrity of these characters that has kept their appeal."

The task of updating the "animated" new look of The Munsters fell to Animated Arts! Art Director and Chief Artist Kelley Jarvis. Animated Arts! is a production and design firm is used by Warner Bros. and other companies to create illustrated storybooks, coloring books, and packaging designs for their licensed characters.

Animated Arts! began by looking at what elements made each character work and initially decided on an animated style that still left the characters recognizable. This style was used for a special edition of The Munsters that was sold at this year's Comic-Con International: San Diego Convention and for #1. The San Diego edition featured an exclusive story in which The Munsters went to a comics con. Jarvis said, "Combining the humorous and horrific nature of the characters in a style that would appeal to a wide range of comics fans wasn't as easy as it originally seemed. The final look blends the best elements of Batman: The Animated Series with elements of humor animation."

George Broderick III provided the pencils for the San Diego edition and issue #1: Storyboard artist-animator Doug Crane drew "Marilyn's Manhattan Makeover" for the second issue, bringing the characters into a different style. Charles Barnett III with Maurizio inked both the special edition and the first issue.

Maurizio said the hardest part of the job is finding enough artists who have the ability to produce work from model sheets. "This type of work is very different from what you see in the average comic book. It's definitely more cartoony caricature, and you have to be able to follow strict licensing guidelines. We were in San Diego and did some portfolio reviews and are still looking for any samples of this type of work artists wish to submit."

The comic book contains more than comics stories. Each issue will also include articles about Munsters history and collectibles, interviews with the original television cast, and an occasional text story with spot illustrations. Maurizio said, "There is a real cult following for The Munsters, and we want the content of the series to reflect their interests, while we also appeal to a new generation of fans who got hooked from watching the show in syndication or on Nick at Nite."

The first issue contains an interview with Grandpa Munster himself, the 86-year-old Al Lewis, who is still acting; the second is an all-Marilyn issue and will contain a Pat Priest interview.

Patten said, "Issue #2 will be a lot of fun. We have two different photo covers, and retailers can order any quantity of each. One will feature Pat Priest, the most well-known Marilyn, and the other will feature Beverly Owen, who played Marilyn for the first 13 episodes. Surprisingly, there are a lot more photos available for us to use with Owen, despite the fact that Pat played the role longer than any other." Priest played Marilyn for the last 57 episodes of the TV show but wasn't asked to continue her role in the feature films.

TV Comics! will use celebrities of the original Munsters cast to promote the comic book. Patten said, "We flew Butch Patrick (who played Eddie Munster on the series) and Pat Priest (the most popular Marilyn) to Comic-Con International this year to publicize the comic book and autograph the preview issue for fans. While they were there, we took the opportunity to conduct extensive interviews that we will publish in later issues. Butch and Pat will work with us to promote the comic book across the country and they are available for store signings. In addition to all that, they will autograph some limited editions for us exclusive to comic stores."

Chris J. Henderson wrote the story for #1 in which Victor Von Helsing arrives at the Munster home searching for Grandpa in order to come to terms with the "bad blood" between their two families, with the usual ensuing misunderstandings and mayhem. Patten wrote the story for the San Diego preview issue featuring the Munsters going to "The California Comic-Con" in San Diego. "This was my first foray into writing TV-type slapstick humor. I had a lot of fun, but it wasn't as easy as I'd thought. It's harder for me to write in this style than to write fantasy or about a troubled relationship. We got to poke a little fun at the comics industry and what goes on at the big conventions. This was the only issue that we were sure would be read by comic fans, so it has a lot of in-jokes.

"A project like this is challenging in so many ways. Characterization is so important with this property. The public is so familiar with these characters. Everything you have them do must ring true to the reader."

Grandpa (Al Lewis) and Eddy (Butch Patrick)

Maurizio agreed and added, "Getting a comic book ready for the printer is a complicated process, and we have to factor in the weeks of approval time on both scripts and art from Universal Studios. That's why we are launching the series bimonthly with hopes of doing 10 issues in 1998."

Patten said, "We don't want to get caught in the late-shipping trap that has plagued the industry over the last few years,"

Several other Munster licensees have shown up recently. Maurizio said, "I was surprised to find out there are so many other Munster licensees out there. I knew about the card set from Dart Cards and Grandpa's Dragster and Munsters House models from Playing Mantis, but I just found out that Star Jars is doing a set of Munster Cookie jars and Exclusive Toy Products has announced they are making a line of Munster figures. For a 33-year-old license, The Munsters is a hot property, and we hope to benefit from the heat some of these other products will generate.

"We are all fans of The Munsters. We enjoy what we do here and have fun doing it. I hope the readers are as pleased with

Sitcom Comics: America's lost genre

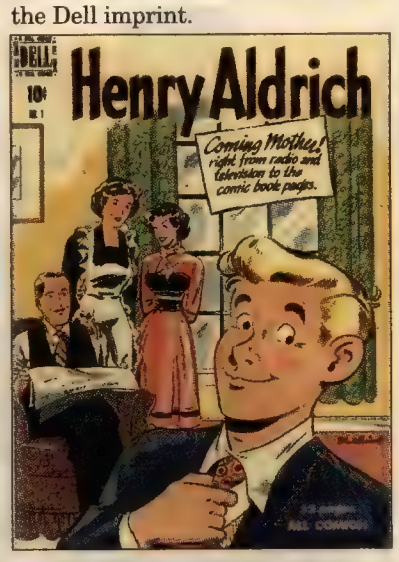
"The success of I Love Lucy both as a television show and a comic book paved the way for an influx of TV comedies into comics."
— Marc Patten

By Marc Patten and Brent Frankenhoff

The term "sitcom" brings to mind such shows as Seinfeld, Friends, Home Improvement, and Cosby. While "situation comedy" wasn't applied as a description of the genre at its beginnings in radio, the situation comedy has been around since the late 1920s, when such radio programs as Amos and Andy, The Jack Benny Show, and Lum and Abner entertained listeners across America. To this day, classic elements of these shows are still found in sitcoms. The humor in many popular characters still lies in their existence as stereotypes or in their display of unfaltering personality quirks. Paul will always remain clueless on Spin City. Tim will always cause some structural disaster on Home Improvement.

Many radio shows eventually made their way to television in the late 1940s and early 1950s, and some of those early programs can still be seen in syndication today. Beginning with series based on such radio shows as My Friend Irma (the early comics were written by Stan Lee) and The Adventures of Ozzie and Harriet (one of DC's earliest forays into the comics adaptation field), comics based on TV sitcoms hit the newsstands of America in the early 1950s.

Perhaps the dominant publisher of sitcom adaptations was Western Printing and Lithographing, which circulated its comics under the Dell imprint.



Henry Aldrich #1 © 1950 Clifford Goldsmith

One of Dell's first comics based on an early sitcom was Henry Aldrich Comics, based on the radio and TV series The Aldrich Family (itself based on the Broadway play What a Life). Dell's 22 issues ran from August 1950 to September 1954 (starting and ending with a year's lag behind the TV show). Dell also gave Our Miss Brooks, a radio show which had made it to television, a try in one issue of its Four-Color series (#751, 1956). The one-shot set in a high school with Brooks as the wisecracking English teacher came out as the television series was ending its run that same year.

One of the first major television comedies to be released in four-color format featured Lucille Ball, in Four Color Comics #535 (appropriately titled I Love Lucy). The success of I Love Lucy both as a television show and a comic book paved the way for an influx of TV comedies into comics. Three months later, a second Lucy comic appeared as Four-Color Comics #559, and the series continued with regular numbering until June 1962, when it ended with #35. (The last episode of the television show aired in late September 1961.)

In October 1962, Ball was back on the air with The Lucy Show. Not so coincidentally, Western was back again (as Gold Key) with new comics — this time based on the new show, which featured Lucy as a widow who shared an apartment with Vivian Vance. The other constant in the show and in the comics was Lucy's overbearing boss, played by Gale Gordon. This time, the comics only lasted five issues (June 1963 to June 1964), though the show continued in varied incarnations until 1974.

In 1990 and 1991, Eternity Comics reprinted material from the syndicated I Love Lucy newspaper strip from the '50s and '60 in two black and white series of si issues each. It also published Love Lucy in Full Color, which re printed #4, 5, 8, and 16 of the Del series in one volume in 1991, a well as I Love Lucy in 3-D, which also featured Dell reprints.

Dell kept with the trends of its other publications based on TV shows or movies and used photo covers for most of its sitcom comics, while most DC comics of the time did not. In February 1954 DC began publishing TV-related comics like Jackie Gleason and the Honeymooners, which ran for 12 issues from June 1955 to May 1958 with standard caricature illustrations and no photo covers.

Although they weren't based on specific shows, DC published the comedic adventures of Bob Hope and Dean Martin and Jerry Lewis beginning in 1950 and 1952, respectively. (Only the first four of the 109 issues of The Adventures of Bob Hope used photo covers.) DC also published The Many Loves of Dobie Gillis from May 1960 to Oct 1964 (and released some of these stories — edited to add such "mod" features as bell-bottoms — under the title Windy & Willy in 1969).

Other sitcoms of the era that spawned comic books included The Phil Silvers Show (known in syndication as Sgt. Bilko, also the name of the DC comic book published from 1957 to 1960). The DC series even had a spin-off: Sgt. Bilko's Pvt. Doberman, published by DC from 1958 to 1960 and featuring the misadventures of the scheming Bilko's subordinate. Phil Silvers' likeness later popped up in Dell's McHale's Navy series, which took the chief schemer to sea and ran for three issues in 1963.

My Little Margie, one of the few television programs to spawn a radio program, featuring the schemes of a widower's daughter to keep him from remarrying, not only had its own Charlton comics series, but two spin-offs: My Little Margie's Boy Friends and My Little Margie's Fashions. The main series began in 1954 just prior to the TV series' last year on the air (the comics title lasted for 10 years, ending in 1964), with Boy Friends following in 1955 and running to 1958. Fashions was the shortest-lived of the three, producing only five issues in 1959.

One pre-1960 sitcom has lasted several incarnations and become a pop-culture icon, including six issues of Dell's Four-Color. Leave It to Beaver originally ran from 1957 to 1963. All the classic television elements were there: the nicest parents a kid could ask for combined with the world's most innocent-looking kids, 12-year-old Wally and 7-year-old Theodore (Beaver) Cleaver. For such a normal American family, the two got into more trouble than you'd ever expect in a half-hour show.

Although a popular radio and television series, The Life of Riley only spawned a single Dell comic book in 1958 (with a photo cover featuring series star William Bendix). The Danny Thomas Show, another popular program, had only slightly better luck with two issues of Four-Color.

However, another top-ranked show which became a comic book at the time was The Andy Griffith Show (a spin-off from an episode of The Danny Thomas Show in which Thomas was jailed in Mayberry by the quiet, affable sheriff played by Griffith), which began in 1960 and ended in fourth place for the year. Dell's first Andy Griffith comic book appeared in the first quarter of 1962, followed quickly by a second issue in April of that year, both sporting photo covers. No more were ever released.

Networks produced shows in the 1960s with some of the most ridiculous premises in entertainment history. Maybe that's why most of these shows hold such a tender spot in our hearts. Many are still in syndication today — especially on such cable networks as Nickelodeon and Nickelodeon's TV Land.

Beginning in 1962 a sitcom explosion occurred. Among the shows that started it all was The Beverly Hillbillies. The show, which featured a poor mountaineer family turned rich Beverly Hills landowners, still holds eight of the top 20 spots of highest-rated episodes in TV history. It was ranked No. 1 for its first two years and ran from 1962 to 1971.

Unlike most of Dell's previous series, The Beverly Hillbillies didn't start in Four-Color, due to that series' cancellation in 1962. The Beverly Hillbillies #1 (April 1963) began a 21-issue series which ran until October 1971. Only five issues didn't have photo covers: #4, #6, #7, #15, and #16. The last four issues appeared near the end of the year in 1967, 1969, 1970, and 1971.

While Beverly Hillbillies spawned two related sitcoms — Green Acres (which reversed the formula by transplanting a city couple into the hill country around Hooterville) and Petticoat Junction (also set in Hooterville) — only the latter series made it to comics, with five issues produced in 1964 and 1965.

Predating The Beverly Hillbillies by five years, but not as well-known today, The Real McCoys had a similar premise to the Hillbillies, with a West Virginia mountain family led by Walter Brennan moving to the San Fernando Valley. The series ran from 1957 to 1963, and Dell produced three issues — all with photo covers of Brennan — from January 1960 to May 1962.

Many mid-'60s shows featured wacky subjects that fit perfectly into the world of comics. Take, for example, Mr. Ed, an ingenious talking horse whose popularity with kids led to six issues, all covers using the photogenic visage of the sardonic animal. My Favorite Martian starring Bill Bixby and Ray Walston as the Martian only lasted three years (1963 to 1966) but turned a nation onto a lovable alien with telekinesis and retractable antennae. The nine issues of the comics series all contained photo covers except #2; its comics were released during the run of the TV show, from January 1964 to October 1966.

Andy Griffith Show spin-off Gomer Pyle U.S.M.C. turned the Marine Corps. upside down on TV from 1964 to 1970 and in three Gold Key comic books (July 1966 to January 1967) published by Gold Key.

Other Dell sitcom comics published during this period included Bachelor Father (two issues), Car 54, Where are You? (seven issues), The Courtship of Eddie's Father (two issues), F-Troop (seven issues), Family Affair (four issues), The Flying Nun (four issues), Gidget (two issues), The Governor and J.J. (three issues), I'm Dickens, He's Fenster (two issues), McKeever and the Colonel (three issues),

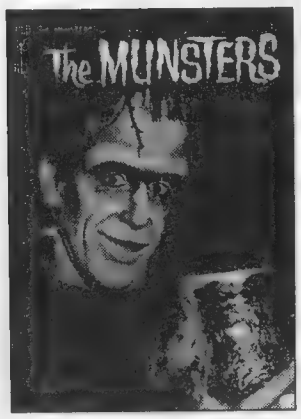
Sorta sitcoms

In addition to the prime-time sitcoms that have come and gone over the years (both on TV and in the comics), a number of live-action series (with laugh tracks in some cases) that originally aired on Saturday mornings could almost be considered sitcoms. Most of these "sorta sitcoms" were produced by Sid & Marty Krofft TV Productions in the early 1970s and comics adaptations of the shows included H.R. Pufnstuf, The Bugaloos, and The New Krofft Supershow (pictured).

Krofft Supershow #1 © 1978 Sid & Marty Krofft TV Productions, Inc.

This latter anthology series featured the adventures of "Bigfoot and Wildboy," "Magic Mongo," "Wonderbug," and "Kaptain Kool and the Kongs."

The six Whitman issues were published in 1978 and 1979.



The Munsters #4 © 1965 Kayro-Vue Productions

While The Addams Family came from comics (panels published in The New Yorker inspired the series) to TV, The Munsters went from TV to comics, with 16 Gold Key issues.

Get Smart #2, 3, 5 © 1966 Talent Associates

SITCOM COMICS

and Room 222 (four issues).

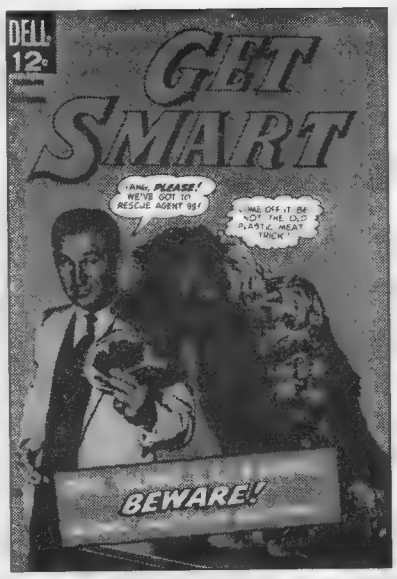
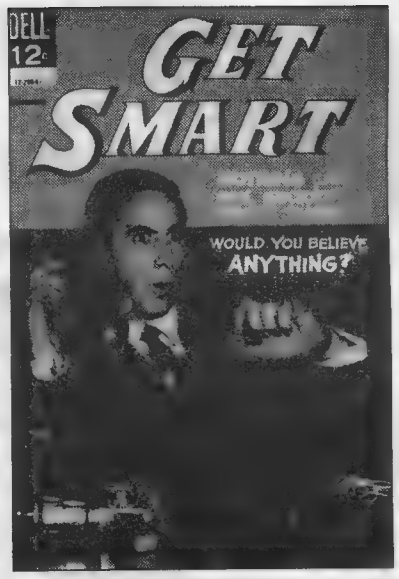
Whether sitcoms made fun of World War II, like Hogan's Heroes (nine Dell issues), or spoofed the growing popularity of spy shows, like Get Smart (six Dell issues, all with Don Adams photo covers), sitcom comics were there to get a piece of the action. Most TV-related comics barely lasted half a dozen issues, but that was mainly because of difficulties in attracting new audiences with something different each month: a problem television didn't have, but television-related comics did. Comics based on non-adventure shows like the sitcom didn't have the "to be continued" characteristic of superhero or other action adventure titles that caused the reader look eagerly for the next issue to arrive.





One attempt to attract members of the eager teen market came with The Monkees, a 17-issue Dell series based on the television series featuring the misadventures of four teen-agers who just wanted "to sing and play." The comics series outlasted the television series by one year, running from 1967 to 1969.

While the spies tripped over bad guys using state-of-the-art technology in Get Smart, magic was brewing elsewhere. Bewitched, featuring Elizabeth Montgomery as the witchy Samantha, ran from 1964 to 1972 and became a Dell series in April 1965. (Only #3-13 of the 14 issues produced used photo covers.) Comics don't always mirror life or television: Although Samantha's husband changed faces in 1969 from actor Dick York to actor Dick Sargent, neither the comics nor their covers reflected the change, and the last Bewitched comic was released in the fall of 1969.

TV's other magical gal was played by Barbara Eden in I Dream of Jeannie (1965-1970).

From comics to sitcoms: The pendulum swings the other way

While cartoonists have been featured on a few sitcoms over the years (He & She, Too Close for Comfort, Caroline in the City, and Bob), a few comics have made the leap from the printed page to TV sitcoms and, in two cases, to the big screen.

Dennis the Menace, Hank Ketcham's long-running comic strip and comic book featuring a boy who was constantly getting into mischief, came to television in 1959 and ran until 1963. Starring Jay North as the loud-voiced human whirlwind (an animated tornado with Dennis' distinctive cowlick ran through the opening credits), the show also starred Gale Gordon as Dennis' long-suffering neighbor Mr. Wilson. Dennis' playmates from the comics, Joey, Tommy, and Margaret, also appeared. Walter Matthau played the part of Wilson for the big-screen live-action production in 1993.

Charles Addams' humorous horror cartoons that ran in The New Yorker came to television in September 1964 with The Addams Family. Starring John Astin as Gomez, Carolyn Jones as Morticia, Jackie Coogan as Morticia's Uncle Fester, Ted Cassidy as Lurch, and Thing as itself (or so the credits said; it was usually Cassidy's hand), the black-and-white series ran for two years. Two motion pictures — The Addams Family in 1991 and Addams Family Values in 1993 — starred Raul Julia as Gomez and Anjelica Huston as Morticia and, with the bigger budget, was able to show more areas of the Addams' mansion than had ever been shown on the small screen.

The latest comic book to make the jump to television is Sabrina the Teenage Witch.

The Archie Comics character has been around for more than 35 years, with guest appearances in nearly every Archie title, including her own series in the early '70s. With the new ABC series, Archie is publishing a new Sabrina series with a photo of TV series star Melissa Joan Hart on each issue's cover. Columnist Kim Metzger provided an episode guide in CBG #1236.

Larry Hagman played astronaut Tony Nelson whose ship aborted its mission and who landed on a desert island, where he found a bottle, rubbed it, and had an instant housekeeper. Jeannie constantly tried to improve the life of her master, aided by the prodding of his buddy Major Roger Healy. Eventually Jeannie and her master became husband and wife one year before the show ended. Jeannie also had a two-year run as a Saturday morning cartoon on CBS (1973-1975), but, despite her successes, her Dell comic book only lasted two issues (both with photo covers) dated April 1965 and December 1966.

One other "magical" female (the series' theme song asked, "Is it love or is it magic?") appeared at the doorstep of Professor Howard Everett in Nanny and the Professor (1970-1971), which featured the Mary Poppins-like nanny Phoebe Figalilly (played by Juliet Mills) helping raise the three Everett children. The two Dell issues were both published in 1970.

Two hokey sitcoms featured ghouls and goblins in the 1960s, but only one made it into comics. The Munsters broadcast 70 episodes in two seasons from 1964 to 1966 — no small feat for a show, even then. The Munsters continued with most of its original cast in several motion pictures, including Munster Go Home and Munster's Revenge, and the show was later revived with a new cast in syndication. Despite the change in Marilyns from Beverly Owen to Pat Priest after the 13th episode, neither was featured on any of the 16 Gold Key issues, which all featured photo covers of humble Herman, Grandpa, and the rest. Many covers featured photo montages with images of cast members doing something related to the interior story. The comic book was published from January 1965 to January 1968, outlasting the original television show by more than a year.

The 1970s saw fewer and fewer sitcom-related comics, as networks began pulling the plug on many long-running comedies and many licenses failed to bring in enough comics buyers to make them worth purchasing. Nevertheless, Dell produced two issues of The Brady Bunch in February and May 1970, while Charlton attempted to pick up more of the action by publishing comics based on The Partridge Family (March 1971 to May 1973).

There were few more releases in the sitcom vein.

Gold Key published six issues based on ABC's top 20 hit Happy Days (March 1979 to February 1980) during the height of the show's popularity. DC Comics was hot on the heels of the popularity of ABC's teen hit Welcome Back Kotter (1975-1979). The show about a teacher and his four dysfunctional students, "The Sweat Hogs," introduced John Travolta and helped make him a star. DC published 10 issues (November 1976 to April 1978). While photos of the cast weren't used on any of the covers, several stories were reprinted in an oversized treasury edition in May 1978.

The characters from three '70s sitcoms — The Brady Bunch, Happy Days, and Eight Is Enough — were featured in three issues of The Kite Fun Book, a series of public-service comics distributed by public utility companies in California and Florida warning children about the dangers of flying their kites near high voltage lines.

Twenty-eight years after the DC series folded, The Honeymooners returned to comics with a one-shot from Lodestone Publishing in 1986 and a 13-issue series from Triad Publishing (1987-1989).

Marvel got into the sitcom comics act in the late 1980s with two series. While Sledge Hammer, based on the ABC series that parodied Clint Eastwood and Charles Bronson cop films, only ran two issues in 1988, Marvel's other sitcom comics series was much more successful. ALF, based on NBC's sitcom misadventures of an Alien Life Form from the planet Melmac, ran from 1988 to 1992, with 50 regular issues, three annuals, and three specials. The series even crossed over with the mainstream Marvel universe, when ALF met The High Evolutionary in ALF Annual #1.

From June 1990 to July 1991, Now Comics published 15 comic books based on the Fox sitcom Married ... with Children. Many of the issues used photo covers of the Bundy family, and the series faithfully captured much of the show's humor, including bathroom jokes.

A comic book featured on a sitcom spawned a six-issue Marvel series in 1993, when Mad Dog, the series featured on the CBS Bob Newhart sitcom Bob, was published.

Much of the history of the creators involved with sitcom comics over the years is hard to find. In the 1950s and 1960s, most comics companies didn't credit writers or artists. Bob Oksner drew many of the issues of the Jackie Gleason, Jerry Lewis, and Bob Hope comics for DC in the 1950s. It is rumored that Gene Colan drew issues of Bewitched and The Beverly Hillbillies, and Russ Manning drew at least the first issue of My Favorite Martian. Some stories for Get Smart were drawn by Steve Ditko.

Television today is proving that "classic" is back, as old properties are revived with new licenses for comics models, dolls, toys, and T-shirts. Time will tell if new sitcomics will take their place on the shelves with the men in tights once more.

THE LAW is a ASS

By Bob Ingersoll

WHITING

This column's title comes from Charles Dickens' Oliver Twist, in which Charles Bumble, a vulgar, common, and ungrammatical man, told that he was liable for the actions of his wife (because English law at the time presumed that a man was responsible for the actions of his wife, responded: "If the law supposes that... the law is a ass — an idiot... The Law is a bachelor. An ass is a donkey.

The author of this column can be reached at P.O. Box 24314, Lyndhurst, OH 44124.

"How cool could a show be, if half its adventures wouldn't have happened had there been a leash law in 1964?"
— Bob Ingersoll

So what was it I grew up watching, The Pseudo Adventures of Jonny Quest?

When I was a kid, there was this real cool show called Jonny Quest about an 11-year-old boy who had real cool adventures with: his scientific genius father, Dr. Benton Quest; his bodyguard, former Special Services Agent Race Bannon; his adoptive brother, Hadji; and Bandit, Jonny's dog who got them into most of their adventures by running off so that Jonny and Hadji had to chase him, usually into some bad guy's camp.

(OK, maybe I'm remembering the show more fondly than I should. I was, after all, 11 myself at the time it was on, and to me it seemed real cool that this blond kid who was the same age as me and who I could pretend to be, got into all these globe-trotting adventures, while the closest I got to globe-trotting was watching Meadowlark Lemon on TV. Still, how cool could a show be, if half its adventures wouldn't have happened had there been a leash law in 1964?)

But I meander.

Last year Hanna-Barbera revived Jonny Quest with a show it called The Real Adventures of Jonny Quest. But somehow it just didn't feel real. Jonny and Hadji were now 15, which didn't really bother me. After all, I was older, too. (Don't go there!) Race had a Southern drawl which sounded hokier than Deputy Dawg's and was so emaciated looking that, with a rubber body suit and nipples, he could play The Scarecrow in the next Batman movie. Race had a daughter, Jessie, who was added to attract the young girl audience that had made She-Ra such a run-away hit. Bandit, who was cute, had bulked and looked like a rock desperately in need of Cycle 6 dog food. And Dr. Quest? Well, he had gone from scientific genius to idiot.

The Real Adventures of Jonny Quest has also spawned a series of Dark Horse comic books.*

Don't believe me? Follow.

The Real Adventures of Jonny Quest features a recurring setting called Questworld. Questworld is one of those ubiquitous virtual-reality programs that can do anything from cordon bleu cooking to brain surgery to time travel but which are easier to crack than eggs at a greasy spoon.

The show also features a recurring villain, Dr. Jeremiah Surd. Surd is an old nemesis of Race's who is now paralyzed. In the first episode with Dr. Surd, "Escape to Questworld," nerve gas was leaking from Surd's old headquarters. Jonny, Jessie, and Hadji found Surd and offered him access to Questworld in return for his help, because in Questworld Surd could again walk. After Surd was defeated, his persona was expelled from Questworld, but not permanently. He installed more back doors in the subroutines of the Questworld program than were put into Levittown. Basically, Surd could hack his way into Questworld at will.

In "Assault on Questworld," Surd used Questworld to attack Hadji's mind. In "Besieged in Paradise," Surd used Questworld to gain control of cetacean communications, prodding savage whale attacks. In "The Secret of the Moai," Surd used Questworld to experiment with human de-evolution. In "Heroes," Surd used Questworld to lure Jonny into a labyrinth of horrors.

Are you detecting a pattern here? And, having detected said pattern, would you have improved the encryption codes on Questworld so that it couldn't be hacked into as easily as teens in a Friday the 13th movie? Apparently, the scientific genius Dr. Quest didn't see the pattern, because we still had to suffer through: "Cyberswitch," where Surd switched bodies with Race, while Race was using Questworld; "Without a Trace," where Surd used the Questworld flight simulator to hijack Air Force One and frame Dr. Quest; "To Bardo and Back," where Surd used Questworld to attack a comatose Race; and "Thoughtscape," where Surd used Questworld to take over Jessie's mind and make her a living weapon against the Quests.

But the episode I want to discuss is "Digital Doublecross," because that's the one that had the law in it, and, if I don't find some law to discuss from the show, then I really wasted all those mornings watching The Real Adventures of Jonny Quest. In "Digital Doublecross," Jessie and Jonny are playing in Questworld, when Surd hacks in and creates murderous doubles of Jonny and Jessie, doubles who will never tire and who will keep hunting down Jonny and Jessie, until they kill the kids.

It falls on Race to get the abort codes from Surd, so that they can turn the program off before Jonny and Jessie tire and can't fight off their digital doubles any longer. But Surd's cooperation has a price: He wants Race to break him out of his jail cell. Race agrees and breaks Surd out of his cell, which prompts the prison authorities to declare Race a lawbreaker and hunt him down.

Do Jonny and Jessie survive? Do the Quests get the abort codes in time? Does Race go to jail for aiding and abetting Dr. Surd in a jail break?

Yes. Yes. And no. (I realize I didn't use my standard Spoiler Warning here. I didn't need it. "Digital Doublecross" was the 43rd episode of The Real Adventures of Jonny Quest." Since there were 52 episodes of the show produced and the final 11 weren't renamed The Real Adventures of Eddie Munster, I don't think I spoiled too much by letting you know Jonny and Jessie didn't die and Race didn't go to prison.)

How and why Race didn't go to prison I'll leave for those who want to watch the episode. Suffice it to say, the show came up with a reason. It just wasn't the right reason. So, rather than give you the contrivance that the show came up with, I'll give you both a quickie lesson in the law and the right reason.

The right reason would have been that Race didn't go to prison because he hadn't done anything illegal. No, I'm not living in some Questworld virtual reality where it's perfectly all right to break murderers and terrorists out of prison. The sky's still blue in my little world and breaking felons out of prison is still illegal. But Race had what we in the legal profession call an affirmative defense.

An affirmative defense, which has nothing to do with how hard we drive white pickets into the ground, has to do with blameworthiness. Ours is a legal system that evaluates the moral blameworthiness of its criminals. We decree that people who are blameworthy when they break the law should be punished, and people who aren't shouldn't. When, for example, people act in self-defense, we find them not guilty, because we feel that people shouldn't be blamed for protecting themselves. When a child under 10 breaks the law, we don't prosecute, because we feel children of tender years aren't capable of understanding what they're doing, so aren't blameworthy for their acts. When the President of the United States authorizes illegal break-ins and wiretaps, then engages in illegal cover-ups of his transgressions, we pardon him because ... actually, I'm still trying to understand that last one.

As part of our legal system's effort to assess moral blameworthiness, we have created a series of affirmative defenses to crimes. An affirmative defense is a legal argument that says: What I did may have violated a law but I am not morally blameworthy and should not be prosecuted. The aforementioned self-defense is an affirmative defense and asserts, "Sure, I killed someone but I was just defending myself from being killed." And we say OK. Insanity is another affirmative defense, as is duress. And duress is the one that applies in Race's case.

Duress, which shouldn't be confused with proper attire at the Senior Prom, is an affirmative defense that says: I did it but I was forced to do it. It's the legal equivalent of "The Devil made me do it." To use the highfalutin' legal words, duress is a "present, imminent, and impending coercion of such a nature as to induce a well-grounded apprehension of death or serious bodily injury if the act is not done." In other and lowerfalutin' words, if you do something illegal, because someone is going to kill or seriously injure you if you don't do what he says to do, you are acting under duress and are not morally blameworthy for your acts or guilty of any crime.

In the case of "Digital Doublecross," Race had a real and well-grounded fear that his daughter and his best friend's son would be killed, if he did not help Surd escape from prison. Under those facts, Race could have successfully interposed the affirmative defense of duress to keep himself from being convicted of any crime. And that's the right reason. None of which forgives Dr. Quest, who should have been prosecuted for child endangerment and negligence for not having turned off Questworld several episodes earlier.

Bob Ingersoll (P.O. Box 24314, Lyndhurst, OH 44124) may be a public defender and the resident legal analyst for CBG, but he's also a former 11-year-old with a long memory. He knew Jonny Quest. He watched Jonny Quest, and, The Placebo Adventures of Jonny Quest, you're no Jonny Quest.

The hunt for Circulation is on

Robert Beerbohm (PO Box 507, Fremont, NB 68026, phone (402) 727-4071) is investigating a magazine circulated free to newspapers served by King Features Syndicate. Circulation ran from 1916 to 1933, and the monthly publication was packed with heavily illustrated features on syndicated material, as well as articles on general news of the day. "Jiggs on Tour," for example, was bylined Geo. McManus. These covers are from every copy of Circulation known to exist, and the black and white pages are samples of internal material. Beerbohm asks readers to help him locate photocopies of the more than 200 other issues that must be hidden in the files of libraries, newspapers, and the like.

GIANT-MAN IS ACTUALLY BEING–ERASED!
by Craig Shutt

Sacre Bleu! Jerry & the Justice League

Dear Mr. Silver Age:

I am ze big fan of Jerry Lewis! Why was he nevair asked to join the Justice League? Sacre bleu!

Andre
Blackhawk Island

Mr. Silver Age says: He sure would've been a better choice than Vibe. But back in Jerry's heyday, Andy, I don't think he really offered what the team was looking for. That's not to say he wasn't pals with some of the members. In fact, he teamed up (more or less) with four of them.

It all started with a Batman team-up in 1966 — which wasn't a real stretch. Thanks to a certain TV show that was all the rage that year, Batman was teaming with lots of folks. So it's not really surprising that "Batman Meets Jerry" appeared in Adventures of Jerry Lewis #97 (Nov-Dec 66).

JERRY LEWIS
THE DYNAMIC DUO FACE THEIR DAFFIEST PERIL! IT'S HO-HO-HOMICIDE WHEN YIKES! IT'S BATMAN AND ROBIN!!
JOKER'S HEALTH CLUB

Worn down from handling all those wanna-bes inspired by their TV show, the dynamic duo are pooped by the time "Batman Meets Jerry" in Adventures of Jerry Lewis #97. Anybody out there remember that TV show?

In fact, the TV show also played a role in the story. Batman and Robin were being kept really busy saving dads and kids who dressed up like super-heroes after watching the show. Those duos included Jerry and his nephew Renfrew, who (at Renfrew's urging) outfitted themselves as Ratman and Rotten, the Boy Blunder. Clever, eh?

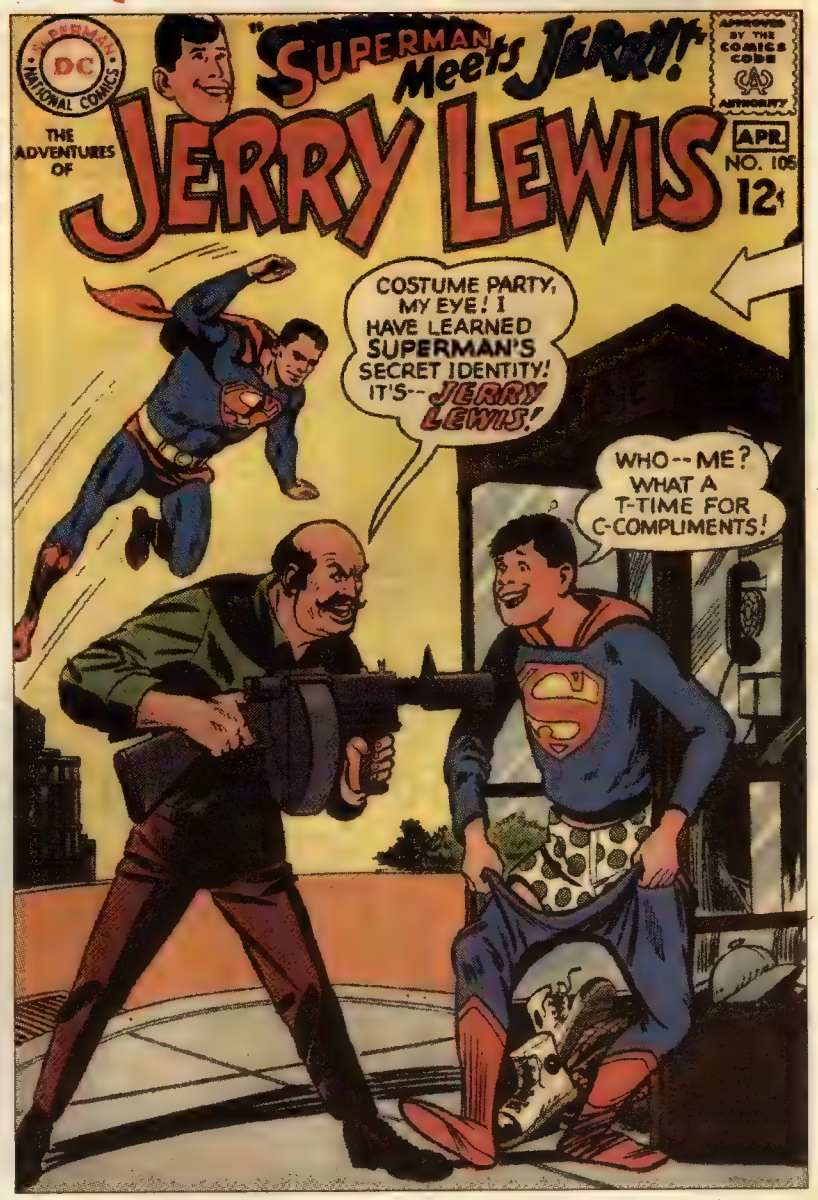
The catalyst for this senses-shattering meeting came when an odd super-villain calling himself The Kangaroo kidnapped Renfrew, apparently thinking he was a millionaire's son. That the size of Jerry's apartment didn't dissuade him from this notion indicates the caliber of villain we were dealing with here.

Batman and Robin showed up to track down Renfrew, and Jer went along in his Ratman costume. "Imagine me, riding in the real, true, 100% genuine Batmobile!" Jerry enthused. "It's marvelous!"

"It'll be more marvelous in three months," Batman said. "That's when we pay off the final note at the bank — and the Batmobile is finally ours."

"The Batman has to borrow money to buy a car?" Jerry asked. "But in real life, you are Bruce Wayne, a famous and wealthy rich man!"

"Sure," Batman agreed, ignoring this revelation from such a goof. "But as Batman, I haven't got a penny's worth of credit! It took me three years to get that bank loan! Did you ever try walking into a bank and borrowing money while wearing a mask?"



DC NATIONAL COMICS
"SUPERMAN Meets JERRY!"
THE ADVENTURES OF JERRY LEWIS
APR NO. 105 12¢
APPROVED BY THE COMICS CODE AUTHORITY
COSTUME PARTY, MY EYE! I HAVE LEARNED SUPERMAN'S SECRET IDENTITY! IT'S--JERRY LEWIS!
WHO--ME? WHAT A T-TIME FOR C-COMPLIMENTS!

It's actually Lex Luthor who comes gunning for the guy in the super suit when "Superman Meets Jerry" in Adventures of Jerry Lewis #105 (Mar-Apr 68). Fortunately, Supes and Witch Kraft are available to help our pal.

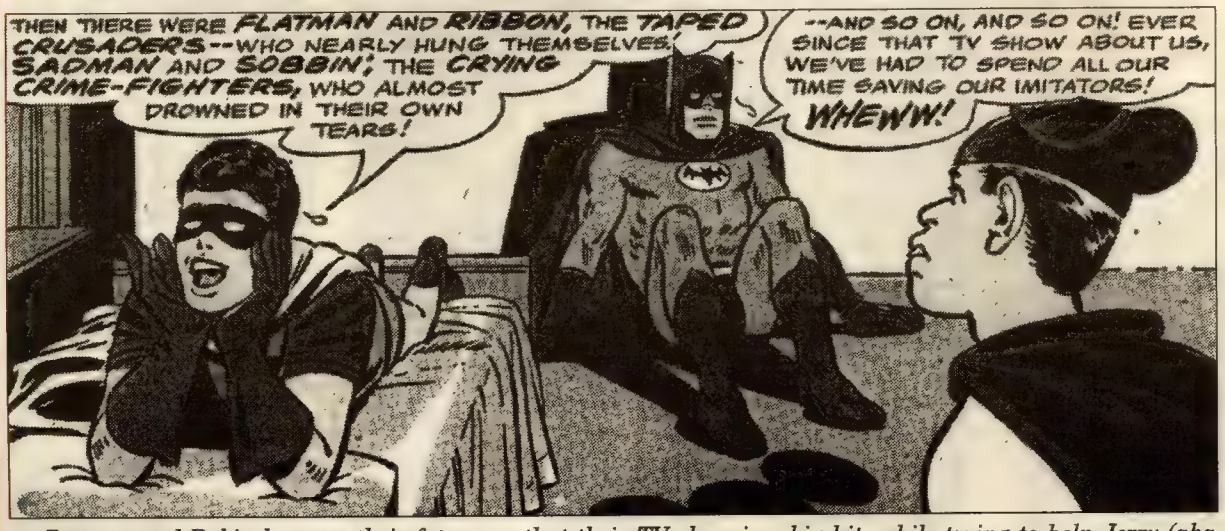
So at least we know where that credit card in the movie came from.

The story also included appearances by The Penguin, The Joker, and The Riddler, who complained about The Kangaroo during a meeting of the American Society of Costumed Villains. They decided to teach Kangy a lesson, adding more fun to the festivities.

That team-up apparently worked so well that "Superman Meets Jerry" appeared in #105 (Mar-Apr 68). This time, Clark Kent showed up to interview Renfrew, who had been picked as the "most typical pre-teen," showing just how bad computer information can be.

Unfortunately, just before he got this assignment, Clark as Superman had stopped Lex Luthor's robot monster. As it blew up, it coated The Man of Steel's costume with kryptonite dust that slowly weakened him.

(Continues on Page 60)



THEN THERE WERE FLATMAN AND RIBBON, THE TAPED CRUSADERS--WHO NEARLY HUNG THEMSELVES! SADMAN AND SOBBIN', THE CRYING CRIME-FIGHTERS, WHO ALMOST DROWNED IN THEIR OWN TEARS!
--AND SO ON, AND SO ON! EVER SINCE THAT TV SHOW ABOUT US, WE'VE HAD TO SPEND ALL OUR TIME SAVING OUR IMITATORS! WHEWW!

Batman and Robin bemoan their fate, now that their TV show is a big hit, while trying to help Jerry (aka Ratman) find where The Kangaroo has absconded with Renfrew (aka Rotten, the Boy Blunder) in Adventures of Jerry Lewis #97.

More on Jerry

Looking for these great Silver Age issues? Don't forget: Jerry will be found under "A" for Adventures of Jerry Lewis — unless the retailer isn't paying attention and puts them under "J."

Jerry started out as one-half of the comic team starring in Adventures of Dean Martin and Jerry Lewis, which continued until Dino left the strip with issue #40. Those early issues usually had Dino's lust for some beautiful babe getting our two pals into hot water, which usually caused Jerry to do some heavy lifting and carrying before saving the day.

Once out on his own, Jerry tended to get into trouble because he was a nice guy who helped others with an agenda or because he fell into jeopardy without even realizing it.

In #85 (Nov-Dec 64), Jerry's nephew Renfrew came to live with him. Renfrew had all the trouble-making capability of Calvin without the benefit of being cute or having a tiger.

To handle Renfrew, Jerry hired a peculiar housekeeper in #88 (May-June 65). Witch Kraft turned out to be, well, a witch, and her spells usually kept Renfrew in line — or at least cleaned up after him. Her niece, Zanyia, also joined in the fun after a while.

Most of these later stories were written by Arnold Drake and drawn by Bob Oksner, a terrific team. Neal Adams drew #104 (Jan-Feb 1968). Although uncredited, Mr. Silver Age could spot his style from across the room, even on Jerry Lewis.

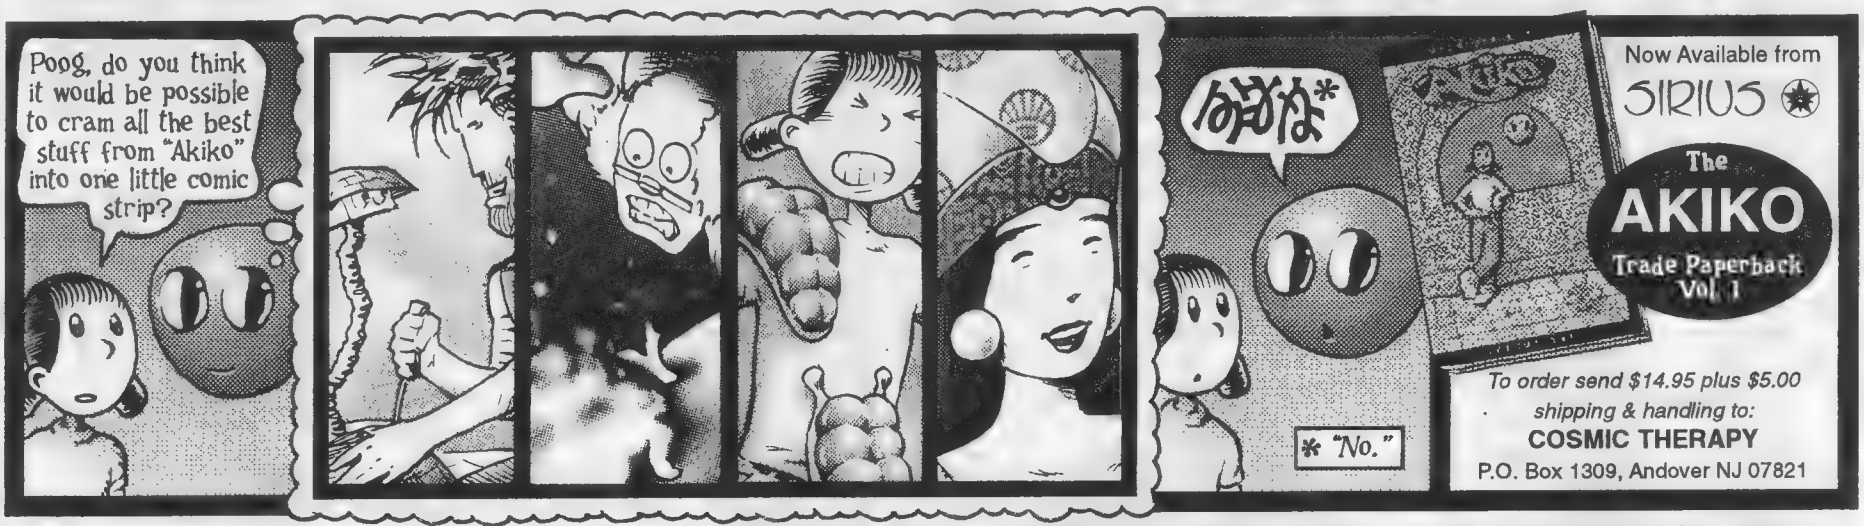
COMICS BUYER'S GUIDE COMICS STRIP

COMICS STRIP changes the way you and the consumer think about advertisements and allows you to display your talents to the Comics Buyer's Guide readers in a format that you and they love the best.

We do ask in the spirit of the comic-strip that your material be suitable (sorry, no profanity, nudity or extreme violence) for all ages.

Each COMICS STRIP is 2-5/8"h x 10"w, and it's within this creative framework that the fun really begins. You'll use at least 3/4 of the space to tell a strip joke, one-panel funny or other attention grabbing notion using sequential art. You'll want to use the remaining 1/4 to promote your actual publication.

Below is a example of how your strip might look...



Poog, do you think it would be possible to cram all the best stuff from "Akiko" into one little comic strip?

MR. LEWIS? I AM CLARK KENT, STAR REPORTER FOR THE "DAILY PLANET!"
HI, MR. KENT! PAY NO ATTENTION TO THIS MESS! I THINK RENFREW WAS SEARCHING FOR SOMETHING!
WITH WHAT-- DYNAMITE?

Clark Kent has the dubious distinction of interviewing Renfrew for the Daily Planet when the paper's computer goes screwy and names Renfrew "America's most typical pre-teen" when "Superman Meets Jerry" in Adventures of Jerry Lewis #105.

So Clark was little help when, after being doused with water by Renfrew and having to take off his clothes (and costume) to dry out, Jerry discovered the Super suit in the wash and put it on, just as Lex showed up, using his kryptonite detector to learn the secret identity of the man wearing Big Blue's suit. Did you follow that?

I think my favorite scene was when Clark, using his still-faltering superbreath to help Jerry perform a semi-super stunt to fool Lex, took a deep breath and sucked in a pigeon instead. You just never saw scenes like that in a Mort Weisinger Superman story.

That adventure proved such a laff riot that "The Flash Meets Jerry Lewis" ran in #112 (May-Jun 69). This time, Jerry wandered into a tailor shop just as a couple of hoods were hustling the proprietor out the door. Jer volunteered to mind the store until the owner returned, which the hoods admitted could be a while.

The shop, of course, was the one where the members of Flash's Rogues Gallery had new costumes made when they got out of jail. Soon, Captain Cold sauntered in to pick up his duds, followed by Abra Kadabra, who accidentally left his wand behind where Renfrew found it. Oops.

The Flash also happened to run by. Mistaking him for the shop's delivery boy, Jerry handed him a bunch of costumes to deliver. Barry delivered the costumes to the crooks — and then delivered the crooks to jail. Gloating at his easy triumph, Barry returned to the shop and accidentally left his Flash ring, which Jerry found. He tried on the costume that sprang out, just as Renfrew gave him a little jolt with the magic wand. At that moment, Abra returned looking for his magic stick, and we were off and running (so to speak).

Last but not least, "Jerry Meets the New Wonder Woman!" was published in #117 (Mar-Apr 70). This time, in a break with tradition, Jerry went out looking for her rather than her coming to him. Sadly, in what was not a break with tradition, Jerry managed to dress up like her. Even more sadly, that didn't even involve wearing that star-spangled number, because at this point in her career she was the New Improved Wonder Woman who was wearing the hip, happening clothes of 1970.

As luck (and our story's needs) would have it, she hurt her leg while signing an autograph for Jerry, forcing her to return to Paradise Island to have it tended to. Jerry and Renfrew got caught in her warp-drive and arrived with her, in time to hear that Wondie's mom had been kidnapped. Since Diana was hurt and Jerry just happened to be available, he dressed up like an Amazon and led the warriors in battle to retrieve Hippolyta. Oh, how I wish I were making this up.

That pretty much ended Jerry's adventures with the JLA. But all things considered, it's an impressive résumé. Let's face it, he knew more of them than Aztek did, and that guy got to learn the secret handshake. Of course, The Ultimate Man lasted about as long in the JLA as Jerry probably would have, too.

Sadly, those spiffy star-spangled duds are in the closet when "Jerry Meets The New Wonder Woman!" in Adventures of Jerry Lewis #117 (Mar-Apr 70). Jerry still gets to dress up like an Amazon, though, so all is not lost.

I GOT SUPER-SPEED LIKE THE FLASH!
I'M WRECKIN' THE JOINT!
MY FEET ARE KILLIN' ME! THEY'RE RUNNIN' ME INTO ALL SORTS OF STUFF!
HAW, HAW! I KNEW THAT WAND WOULD GIVE ME SOME LAUGHS!
HELP! MAD FEET

With help from Abra Kadabra's wand and the ring Barry Allen accidentally left in his pocket when he got his pants pressed at Jerry's shop, our pal gets to try on a Flashy suit. The result is that "The Flash Meets Jerry Lewis" in Jerry Lewis #112.

Ask Mr. SILVER AGE
JUMPING JETS!
IF WE METAL MEN FAIL THE WORLD OF HUMANS WILL BE DOOMED!
GIANT-MAN IS ACTUALLY BEING-ERASED!
by Craig Shutt

Dear Mr. Silver Age,

My favorite super-hero always has been Super-Hip. He's so fab, so swinging, so groovy! So, like, why didn't he ever join the Justice League?

Dobie G.
Westfield

Mr. Silver Age says: Good question, Dobe. Sadly, even though Super-Hip's powers would make him a strong choice, I think his chances are pretty slim. Although with the candidates the JLA has been considering recently, I wouldn't rule him out altogether.

Super-Hip, the patron super-hero of all swingers and the mortal enemy of every super-square — the man whose war cry was "Blech to Lawrence Welk!" — made his debut in Adventures of Bob Hope #95 (Oct-Nov 65) when The Bobster met "Super-Hip, the Sickest Super-Hero of 'Em All!"

When The Emperor of Insville joined the cast, it indicated a change in the series' direction. From its beginning in February 1950, Bob's stories generally featured our hero getting into trouble by innocently offering to help some sexy babe out of a jam. Her difficulties typically centered on her wacky father or uncle, who had created something or done something to attract the attention of nogoodniks.

This basic plot worked far longer than one would have expected, but, hey, it was the 1950s. By the mid-1960s, Editor Murray Boltinoff decided to try something new. Bob received a sidekick in #86 (Apr-May 64), a talking fox hound called Harvard Harvard III. But the two of them still managed to mostly get into trouble while helping beautiful babes.

Bob's really new direction began when

ADVENTURES OF THE SWIM

Have you ever had one of those days? In Adventures of Bob Hope #95 (Oct-Nov 65), Bob not only met his new live-in high-school student, Tadwallader Jutefruce, but also swingin' Super-Hip and the faculty at Benedict Arnold High School.

ANOTHER MOMENT OF WHIRLING FURY PASSES AND THEN THE TREMBLING FIGURE OF TADWALLADER SUDDENLY CHANGES...
YES, WORLD--I AM HERE! THE BOY YOU'VE BEEN WAITING FOR SINCE FOR-EVER! SINCE THE BEATLES HAD THEIR LAST HAIRCUT! SINCE PARENTS DUG TEEN-AGERS! SINCE DANCING WAS FOR PEOPLE! I-- THE PATRON SUPER-HERO OF ALL SWINGERS! THE MORTAL ENEMY OF EVERY SUPER SQUARE! WITH MY WAR CRY-- "DOWN WITH LAWRENCE WELK!"
15

Tadwallader Jutefruce's first day at school proved so traumatic that his long-repressed anger changed him into Super-Hip, the mortal enemy of every super-square, in Adventures of Bob Hope #95 (Oct-Nov 65). Tad didn't know he was Super-Hip, although S-H knew he was Tad.

Yeah, OK, Bob had some hilarious adventures and a super-hero to boot, but the cover to Bob Hope #102 (Dec-Jan 67) gives an inkling of why Mr. Silver Age really was such a big fan. Bob Oksner drew nubile coeds like nobody this side of Dan DeCarlo.

Join the JLA?

You may scoff at the thought of Super-Hip joining the JLA, but it's not that outlandish. After all, he attended the wedding of "The Bride of the Doom Patrol," when Rita (Elasti-Girl) Farr married Steve (Mento) Dayton. During that gala occasion, he got to rub shoulders with all kinds of superguys.

This momentous event occurred in Doom Patrol #104 (Jun 66), no doubt at the invitation of Arnold Drake, the writer of both features.

As the bride and groomed kissed, a number of heroes looked on in approval, including Superman, Batman, Wonder Woman, Flash, The Teen Titans — and Super-Hip. Our groovy super-cat exclaimed, "Man! Like this wedding swings better than a graduation gig at Benedict Arnold High!"

So who knows? Maybe next time before the JLA gives a tryout to someone as dubious as Hitman or some unknown like Tomorrow Woman, they'll give ol' Tad a call. It could happen. Really.

SUPER-HIP

his best friend, "Crazy Legs" Jutefruce, sent his son to live with Bob while he and his wife traveled in Europe. Bob figured a sports-nutty guy like "Crazy Legs" would have an athletic son, too. Instead, he got Tadwallader Jutefruce, who collected butterflies and made Clark Kent look like a party animal.

Dismayed, Bob pulled some practical jokes to get Tad to lose his temper. But they didn't work. Defeated, he let Tad go off to register at Benedict Arnold High School, introducing us to the rest of our soon-to-be continuing cast of characters — emphasis on character.

They included homeroom and biology teacher Beverly Ghastly, who looked like she'd just stepped out of Night of the Living Dead; driving instructor "Crash" Vyctim, who brought plenty of his own bandages with him; chemistry professor Heinrich Von Wolfman; gym teacher Frank Stein; and principal Dr. Van Pyre, whose names pretty well summed them up. Perhaps most monstrous of all was rich kid Badger Goldliver and his sidekick Doltish, two hoods who loved to pick on Tad.

Making up for them was Lisa, a nubile if somewhat dim brunette coed who had an unexplainable fondness for Tad. And when it came to drawing nubile high-school coeds, artist Bob Oksner took a back seat to nobody, except maybe Dan DeCarlo when he was really in peak form on those Betty & Veronica Summer Fun Giants. Some of those pin-ups are burned into my brain as deeply as that cover of Superman with a giant ant's head. But I digress.

Tad was a little shaken by meeting the dubious faculty. But he held himself in check until he upset Lisa (in the same way Peter Parker did with Gwen Stacy before they started getting cozy) and Badger pushed him into the campus fountain.

"I'm not angry!" he convinced himself. "I'm full of rage inside — but I'm not angry! I'm not angreeeeeeeeee!" And, with that, he spun madly in a circle about a billion times and there stood Super-Hip.

Dressed in a spiffy purple Nehru jacket (ask your dad, kids) with a ruffled ascot, skin-tight green pants, and winged blue shoes, Super-Hip looked like he might have taken too many fashion tips from the Golden Age Green Lantern. He also sported long shaggy blond hair and carried a guitar, proving how hip he was, at least at mid-1960s DC.

His clothes may been suspect, but his powers were top-notch. Basically, he could turn himself into anything he wanted. For instance, in that first adventure, which focused on getting back at Badger, he shape-changed into a hair clipper, a bottle of Wildest Root Cream Oil, an aerosol can of whipped cream, an ice cream scoop, a bottle of cherries, a fan (to blow off Bob's clothes), a whirlwind, and a vacuum cleaner.

This was not a bad power to have. It sure beat talking to fish or shooting boxing-glove arrows. The only problem was that Tad never remembered being Super-Hip, so he didn't even realize this mad mod with the moving mouth was his alter ego — although Super-Hip knew he was Tad and regretted every moment of it.

Bob managed to wind up in the thick of things by chaperoning the group on field trips and whatnot.

BUT IMPERSONATING SUPER-HIP INVOLVES MORE THAN A MERE COSTUME, MAHSTAH!
CHECK! IT MEANS I'VE GOT TO FLY-- WHICH IS WHY I'VE GOT THIS JET ENGINE STRAPPED TO ME-- DIG?
KAFF-KAFF! I-S-S-SEE! KAFF! BUT SUPER-HIP DOES MORE THAN THAT! KAFF!

THAT'S A CINCH! I JUST PRESS THE COTTAGE CHEESE BUTTON AND--

ONE CARTON
PLOOOOH
WOULD YOU MIND DROPPING SOME PINEAPPLE CHUNKS AND WALNUTS, TOO? I'M INORDINATELY FOND OF "HAWAIIAN SURPRISE!"

Impersonating Super-Hip took more ingenuity than just donning a costume, as Bob discovered when "Super-Hope Meets Super-Hip" in Adventures of Bob Hope #99 (Jun-Jul 66). Fortunately, he had more gizmos than Jimmy Olsen had junk in his disguise trunk.

Bob never seemed to worry much about having to work for a living. Maybe he was a free-lancer.

The high school hijinx continued unabated in later issues, as Tad: tried out for the football team, helped prepare a dragster for the big race, went to a state teachers' convention, used a match-making computer, surfed, visited Washington, D.C., on a field trip, and went skiing. Every time, things got out of control and Super-Hip had to fix things up, more or less.

Bob became so jealous of Super-Hip's way with the chicks that he impersonated our hero in "Super-Hope Meets Super-Hip!" in #99 (Jun-Jul 66). Mimicking someone who could turn into anything at all took a bit of ingenuity, but Bob was up to the challenge.

Bob finally discovered Super-Hip's identity in "The Invasion of the Teen Monsters" in #103 (Dec-Jan 67). Being the decent sort, Bob tried to let Tad in on the secret. But the mere mention of Super-Hip's name so upset Tad that Bob decided to leave well enough alone.

Even though the licensing rights to Bob's likeness have no doubt run out by now, DC still has Super-Hip ready and waiting for that next JLA membership drive. He's at least got seniority on Aztek.

I NOW PRONOUNCE YOU MAN AND WIFE! YOU MAY KISS THE BRIDE!
WHERE'S THAT CLARK KENT? HE WAS SUPPOSED TO COVER THIS STORY FOR "THE DAILY PLANET!"
MAN--LIKE THIS WEDDING SWINGS BETTER THAN A GRADUATION GIG AT BENEDICT ARNOLD HIGH!
GREAT ZEUS, WHAT A KISS!

Super-Hip rubbed shoulders with a gaggle of super-heroes, when Rita Farr became "The Bride of the Doom Patrol" in Doom Patrol #104 (Jun 66). Too bad he didn't pick up an application form. Maybe it's not too late to snag one.

GRAB BAGS

◆ For the following grab bags, you choose the category from the list of grab bag types below, and you choose the amount you want to spend. I choose the individual items in the set. Unless otherwise stated, each grab bag will contain mostly comics, and possibly some other types of items including but not limited to: Graphic novels, magazines, books, trade paper backs, figures, cards, t-shirts, posters, etc. All prices are based on the latest Overstreet publication, or current market value if Overstreet price is not available , or out-dated. If you want a more specific grab bag, call ahead, and I may be able to put one together for a small premium depending on availability (for example: comics only, or VF or better condition only, etc.). Categories may include main titles, secondary titles, spin-off titles (i.e.. Thor category would include Thunderstrike), and cross-over appearances (not cameos). Most items will be from 1970-1999's. All prices include extra costs for shipping, etc., but please remember to include the standard postage fee under 'terms'.

CATEGORIES TO CHOOSE FROM

◆ Mutants (X-men, wolverine, etc.); Spider-man & spin-offs (Venom, etc.); Superman; Batman; Adults only titles (must have a signed age statement over 18); misc. Valiants; misc. Image; Surprise package (all my choice); War titles; collectible magazines and price guides (Wizard, Fan, etc.); misc graphic novels only; TV cartoons (G I Joe, Transformers, Star Universe, Superfriends, etc.); Vertigo or other Mature titles (Epic, etc.); Marvel UK titles (Death's Head, etc.); Kid stuff (Alf, Barbie, Harvey, etc.); Westerns; Funny Animal & Comic Strip characters; Vigilantes (Punisher, Vigilante, etc.); Speedsters (Flash, etc.); Teams (Avengers, JLA, X-men, etc.); Green Lantern; Avengers; Fantastic Four; Silver Surfer; Thor; JLA/JSA; Wonder Woman; Hawkman; Ironman; Spirits of Vengeance (Ghost Rider, Dr. Strange, Hellstorm, etc.); New Universe; Hulk; Fury (Sgt Fury, Nick Fury, Shield, etc.); Captain America; Daredevil; Sci-fi/Space (Star Wars, Star Trek, etc.); Aliens/Predator/Terminator; Movie/TV (Green Hornet, movie adaptations, etc.); Horror; Fantasy/Barbarians (Conan, Tarzan, Kull, Elfquest, Dangerlance, etc.); Humor (Ambush Bug, Harveys, etc.); and possibly other categories you might come up with.

TRADERS

Trader ads are available for $40.00 each. Traders are designed by the advertiser on 8-1/2" x 8-1/2" paper. We reduce the ad to 3-1/4" x 3-1/4" size. Trader ads are a low cost form of advertising. Because of this, CBG does not typeset, screen photos, add logos, artwork or credit card symbols to Trader ads.

What some of our clients have to say:

Got the Blazing #1 yesterday. I am very impressed with the work. I am also impressed with the documentation that came with the package...Nice job! - Phil B.

I just received the books yesterday and I want to say that you did a fantastic job. The work definitely met my expectations and in some cases exceeded them...Your documentation was very descriptive and will be very useful if I ever decide to sell these books (which I can't see happening for a long, long time). - Dan M.

I used Tracey Heft's services last fall to repair and restore a comic book from 1948. There were considerable flaws in the book, including extensive tearing and a badly curled spine. Mr Heft engaged in detailed preliminary discussions with me before doing the repairs and then did them exactly as he promised for the cost we had discussed. I felt I understood the processes he was using completely and I was totally satisfied with the work he did which was clean, professional and completely documented The book was repaired from a G- to a F++, a higher grade than I was anticipating. He is, on top of being technically proficient, also a very easy person to talk to, and he will keep you appraised of any and all work or changes he may wish to undertake before he undertakes them. I recommend him without reservation. - Michael R.

TRADERS

Trader ads are available for $40.00 each. Traders are designed by the advertiser on 8-1/2" x 8-1/2" paper. We reduce the ad to 3-1/4" x 3-1/4" size. Trader ads are a low cost form of advertising. Because of this, CBG does not typeset, screen photos, add logos, artwork or credit card symbols to Trader ads.

TRADERS

Trader ads are available for $40.00 each. Traders are designed by the advertiser on 8-1/2" x 8-1/2" paper. We reduce the ad to 3-1/4" x 3-1/4" size. Trader ads are a low cost form of advertising. Because of this, CBG does not typeset, screen photos, add logos, artwork or credit card symbols to Trader ads.

blue and red tights? Probably not. And Michael Keaton couldn't carry off gray, black, and blue tights, so they changed them and it looked good on screen. They'll probably do the same for this, as well.

I'd love to join the hullabaloo, but — ol' dopey me — I think I'll hold off on demonizing the film until I actually see it. Just this quirky thing I do.

❖ At San Diego, I was part of a contingent of CBG folks who went to see next year's Hugo Award-winning best dramatic film, Contact. I thought it was absolutely breathtaking. The dead silence during the opening two minutes with the steady pullback into infinity (and beyond) is probably the single most convincing feeling of outer-space travel I've ever seen. To say nothing of answering the eternal question of: If there's intelligent life on other planets, why haven't they made contact with us? It's a question based on the same sort of human egocentricity that once inspired mankind to think that the sun orbited the Earth. The answer is best summarized by Douglas Adams who wrote, with deceptive obviousness, "Space is big. Really big." Trying to find us is like trying to find a heavily populated microbe.

What's a little depressing is that the opening depends entirely upon having a good audience. We did, but, when my eldest daughter, Shana, saw it some weeks later, the dopes in the theater decided to fill the quiet with their endless and extremely unclever chatter ("Space, the final frontier," they called out and laughed loudly at their own wit.) Very annoying.

❖ I totally psyched out Mark Waid at Chicago.

One morning, I ordered breakfast from room service. In handing me the bill to sign, the room service guy handed me the wrong check. It was the bill for Room 534, and the signature at the bottom was "Mark Waid."

I looked over what Mark had had to eat, and the next time I saw him I said, "So Mark, how was your omelette this morning you had from room service? Good orange juice?"

Mark stared me in complete befuddlement and said, "How did you —?"

Putting on my Hannibal Lecter voice and demeanor, I said, "Oh, I know everything that goes on in Room 534, Mark."

He looked like I'd smacked him in the face with a two-by-four. It was great. Best thing is I never told him how I knew.

So none of you guys tell him, OK?

❖ One of the guests at Rebelcon was actor Stephen Furst. Beth (who accompanied me to that con) was excited to hear this, because she's a therapist and knew him from a film called The Dream Team. I told her that was unusual: When it comes to films, most people know him as Flounder. Having almost no recollection of Animal House, she said with surprise, "You mean he was that animated fish in The Little Mermaid?"

Beth and I had breakfast with Stephen Sunday morning at RebelCon. During the conservation, Beth made passing mention of her ex-husband. Stephen stared at her, stunned, "How long were you married," he asked.

"Five years. Why?"

"Because," he said in amazement, "I thought you were, like, 17."

I'd never seen her slam her head on a table quite that way before.

Peter David, writer of stuff, can be written to at To Be Continued Inc., PO Box 239, Bayport, NY 11705. He's 40 and looks it.

Wolff & Byrd, Counselors of the Macabre — By Ballon Lash

THE STORY SO FAR: A FIFTH-GENERATION VAMPIRE HAS GOTTEN AN OFFER FROM HOLLYWOOD, BUT HIS LAWYERS WANT TO DRIVE A STAKE THROUGH THE DEAL . . .
WE CANT ADVISE THE COUNT TO SIGN WITH QUAGMIRE, WOLFF--THAT CONTRACT IS AN INSULT! WHO DOES QUAGMIRE THINK THEYRE FOOLING?
A VERY NAIVE AND STARRY-EYED VAMPIRE, THAT'S WHO, BYRD!
HE'S BEEN SHELTERED ALL HIS LIFE, AND NOW WITH HOLLYWOOD KNOCKING ON HIS COFFIN, HE'S READY TO SPREAD THE WORD ON THE JOYS OF VAMPIRISM! I DON'T THINK HE'S AWARE OF HOW HARSH THE REAL WORLD IS . . .
© 1994 BALLON LASH 0561-4
MEANWHILE, IN A SWANK WEST HOLLYWOOD RESTAURANT, THE "COUNT" IS STILL REELING FROM AN ENCOUNTER WITH A DARK STRANGER WHO STOPPED BY HIS TABLE . . .
WHO DOES THAT VAMPIRE THINK HE IS? SO WHAT IF HE'S FIRST GENERATION! I'M TRYING TO BRING OUR KIND OUT OF THE CEMETERY AND INTO SOCIETY . . .
AND HE THREATENED ME, TOO! I SHOULD HAVE MY LAWYERS SEND HIM A LETTER . . .
HMM-- WHAT THE HECK IS KEEPING TIFFANY? SHE MUSTVE LEFT FOR THE RESTROOM 20 MINUTES AGO!
COME QUICK! THERE'S A BODY IN THE LADIES' ROOM-- AND IT'S DRAINED OF BLOOD!
HUH?!
GOOD LORD! I RECOGNIZE THE BODY-- SHE'S THE VAMPIRE'S DATE!
CHECK, PLEASE!
NEXT: SUPER-NATURAL BORN KILLER?

The advertisers' index is provided as a reader service. Occasional last minute changes may result in ads appearing on pages other than those listed here. The publisher assumes no liability for omissions or errors.

GENERAL INFORMATION

A. PAYMENT: Ads must be accompanied by payment. You may pay with a check, money order, or credit card.

B. CREDIT CARDS: We will accept the following credit cards: VISA, MasterCard, American Express, Discover.

C. DEADLINE: For all advertising is 4:00 p.m. each Tuesday, unless otherwise stated on deadline card.

D. TERMS: Cash with copy only. All advertisers must provide information for the confidential use of the publisher should questions arise.

E. CONTRACT RATES are available for 6, 13, 26, or 52 consecutive issues. Contract rates apply to fulfillment of contract items. Cancellation of a contract by the advertiser allows the publisher to reinvoice covered ads at the earned rate. This rate card is a part of the advertising contract.

F. MINORS are required to furnish a statement of responsibility from their parent or guardian before their advertising can be accepted.

G. ERRORS: Typewritten copy is recommended. The publisher is not responsible for errors resulting from long-hand or illegible copy, or changes submitted by telephone. The publisher's liability for any error shall not exceed the cost of the space occupied by that error.

H. LAYOUT and design services are provided by Krause Publications for advertisers who do not submit camera-ready copy. Due to the creative and subjective nature of these services, credit will not be allowed for conceptual variations.

I. GRADING: Items offered in any ad must be properly described as to condition, conforming to the standards set forth in Comics Buyer's Guide Price Guide. Advertisers may also exercise the option of grading offerings by applying a unique personal system, providing the standards applied are detailed in the ad to avoid confusion.

J. RETURN PRIVILEGE: Except as otherwise specified in any ad, an advertiser must accept the return of any merchandise postmarked within ten working days of its receipt by a customer.

K. P.O. BOX ADS are allowed, but the permanent home address, phone number and place of business of the advertiser must be filed with the publisher before advertisements may be printed.

L. SPECIAL PAGE POSITIONS are available at a premium, inquire for details.

M. ADVERTISING AGENCIES: There are no agency discounts.

N. CAMERA READY display ads qualify for a 15% discount. Copy must be ready for camera without additional paste-up or film work required. No charge for reproductions; enlargements or mail response key change. Classified Display, Comics Trader, Collector's Showcase and classified word ads do not qualify for the camera ready discount.

O. SPACE RESERVATIONS available for camera ready ads only. Must be made prior to ad deadline. Reserved space must be paid for even if ad does not arrive on time.

P. PRE-PRINTED INSERTS are available in Comics Buyer's Guide. Inquire for additional information and technical specifications.

Q. CIRCULATION is throughout the United States and Canada by subscription and single copy sales by agents in shops and other outlets.

R. PROOF OF PUBLICATION: Tear sheets of new display ads are mailed to those advertisers requesting this service. We regret we cannot provide this service to classified advertisers.

S. NOTE: All advertising orders are accepted subject to the terms and provisions of the current rate card. Krause Publications, Inc. reserves the right to decline advertising or suspend advertising privileges for such periods of time as in its discretion it sees fit, for any reason, whatsoever, irrespective of the validity of the reasons for such declination or suspension. The forwarding of an order is construed as acceptance of all rates and conditions in effect at the time the advertising is submitted. The publisher will not be bound by any conditions, printed or otherwise, appearing on any order for advertising space, billing instructions or copy instructions which conflict with its policies. Advertisers and advertising agencies assume liability for all content (including text representation and illustrations) of advertisements printed, and also assumes responsibility of any claims arising therefrom made against the publisher. It is the advertiser's or agency's responsibility to obtain appropriate releases on any item or individual pictured in their advertising. All agreements are subject to strikes, accidents, acts of God, or other contingencies beyond the publisher's control. The publisher reserves the right to edit any advertising copy to conform with its standard advertising policies, and to reject any ad which in its opinion is unethical or objectional for any reason.

C. RETAILER DIRECTORY ..... $3.50 per issue

Leads fans to your cash register! List your store name, address, phone number and 15 words of description. Sold in 26 and 52 week increments. It's targeted more to the comics buff than the yellow pages - and it's more cost effective. If you sell COMICS BUYER'S GUIDE in your store, we will publish your listing in bold face type at no extra charge.

ADVERTISING REQUIREMENTS

A completed reference form must be in our confidential files before any buy, sell or trade ad can be placed. See below. Minors are required to furnish a statement of responsibility from their parents or guardian before their advertising can be accepted.
Payment must accompany an advertisement and must be in the form of a personal check drawn on U.S., Canadian or Mexican bank; money orders; international money orders; cashier's checks; or with your VISA, MasterCard, American Express or Discover credit card. Send your credit card number, expiration date, and the name on the card, along with permission to charge the card for your ad, with your advertising copy.

Assorted thoughts and incidents picked up from this summer's convention trail, during which I set an all-time personal best (or most exhausted) with a series of conventions including the Chicago Comicon, Orlando Megacon, San Diego, Shore Leave (Maryland), Stellar Occasion (Texas), RebelCon (Massachusetts), and Heroes Con (North Carolina) — or, to put it succinctly, this is how I spent my summer vacation:

Now Appearing

❖ I'm not entirely sure why people will run up to me at the end of a convention and say, "I've been chasing you all over the convention (or some previous convention) trying to get you to autograph my comics, and it took me this long to (or I was never able to) catch up with you."

Every time I do signings at conventions, the times for the sessions are always posted well in advance. Don't people read? Can't they mark it in their schedules? I just find it a little disconcerting, because, more often than not, there's an almost accusatory tone to the comment, as if I've been aggressively leading them a merry chase, trying to stay one step ahead of them.

At San Diego, for instance, there I was Saturday doing a (fully publicized) two-hour signing at the Marvel booth, followed immediately by another (fully publicized) two hours at the Claypool table — and during the next five minutes after I started walking around on my modest free time, half a dozen people came up to me and said, "Are you doing any signings today?" This was at 3 in the afternoon — had they all just arrived? Sheesh.

❖ I was very interested to discover that, according to the fan rumor mill, I have a girlfriend. Not only that, but she's under age. This apparently arose from the fact that, at the Orlando Megacon, there was a charming young lady who sat with me much of the time at the autograph table, who seemed amazed and fascinated by the crowds lining up to get my signature on stuff, and who clearly was very fond of me.

It's not as if we were necking in public or anything — we definitely weren't — but her very presence was enough to get tongues wagging. When I related this to the lady in question, she found it most amusing considering that (a) she's not under age — she's 29 — and (b) she's my sister, Beth, who has just started getting interested in conventions and accompanied me to a couple this year. Upon learning this, she said, very disconcerted, "Do I look under age?" To which I replied, in my most consoling big-brother tone, "Sure do. You look like jailbait to me."

❖ At Shore Leave, I participated in an annual sketch that was founded by DC Editor Bob Greenberger, Star Trek author Mike Friedman, and me. We call it "Mystery Trekkie Theater 3000," and it's exactly what it sounds like. The three of us sit in front of a screen, our silhouettes cast upon it, and we tear apart an episode of Star Trek. When we first started doing it, we stayed with original Trek episodes which were available on film: clunkers such as "Turnabout Intruder," "The Apple," and even "Shore Leave." (In the latter, when Kirk's nemesis, Finnegan, runs away from Kirk, he shouts, in our version, "He's after me Lucky Charms! They're magically delicious!") We are usually joined by Brad Ferguson and Bob Pinaha (this year T. Alan Chafin substituted for Bob) as the mad scientists.

We also do a sketch/invention exchange at the top of the show, and this year we carried off the single most involved bit we've ever done. It went like this: None of us were on stage. Over the PA system, the announcer (me) said, "Attention ... attention, people sitting in the first three rows: You will be ... assimilated. Resistance ... is ... futile." This caused a ripple of nervous laughter; they knew that something was coming up that was Borg-related — and that at least some audience members were going to be victimized.

Ominous Borg music began to play, and I intoned, "They think with one mind. They move with one purpose. You've seen them terrorize the Enterprise. You've seen them pursue the Voyager. But you've never seen them *like this!"

The recorded music suddenly made a hard cut from the Borg music to the drum-slamming pounding of Irish stepdancing. And I bellowed, "The dance sensation of the Delta Quadrant, now on its galaxy-wide tour! It's Riverborg!"

Out onto the stage hopskipped two young ladies (my daughter Gwen and a friend of hers) dressed in black with little skirts, their faces Borgified. They met at the middle of the stage, danced as the audience roared — and then Bob, Mike, and I stepdanced (or at least some vague approximation of it, since none of us have taken a stepdancing lesson in our lives) up the middle aisle, dressed as the cheesiest looking Borg you could ever hope to meet.

We did a bizarre set of hopping about on the stage for a minute and then were joined by the Borg queen (Beth) doing the Flamenco. She hauled a sucker out of the audience, proceeded to assimilate him by dancing around him, and suddenly Michael Flathead, the Borg of the Dance (a guy named Danny Coggins, who is a semi-pro skater) leaped up onto the stage and proceeded to do some really nifty steps with the Borg queen. In the meantime, the rest of us shuffled, Frankenstein-monster-like, into the audience, hauled surprisingly willing victims onto the stage, spun them around, and formed a long line, as the music reached its climax.

It was the only time we've ever done a sketch that got a standing ovation. As for me, I'd love to see what a group of people who have really good-looking Borg costumes and can actually dance would do with the concept. So anyone who wants to, go right ahead.

❖ Also making its debut at Shore Leave: A couple of fans at the Saturday night dance introduced a little number they called "The Imperial Death Macarena."

It's a terrifyingly simple concept: The Imperial March (or as others refer to it, "Darth Vader's Theme") from The Empire Strikes Back is exactly the right beat and cadence for dancing the Macarena. Try it, right this second. Hum the basic march to yourself. You know: dah-dah-dah, dah-dah-dah, dah-dah-dah, etc. Do the hand movements, the hip pivot. It all times out perfectly, doesn't it? Isn't that scary? Fans could start doing it at showing of Empire as if it were The Rocky Horror Picture Show.

A guy saw me dancing with my sister at the party, by the way. He asked me if she was my teen-age daughter. I gleefully related this to her, and she rolled her eyes and insisted she doesn't look like a teen-ager.

❖ I was working late one night and had the TV set on. I saw an ad for one of those psychic phone services. They tried to encourage me to call, saying that they could help me with my problems. That they wanted to, they were most anxious to. This wouldn't be a bad idea, because I can use all the help I can get.

But I don't understand something. If they're really psychic, and they really want to help — why don't they call me? I mean, wouldn't they just know? Isn't that kind of the point of being psychic?

It makes me most suspicious.

❖ Fans were all up in arms about Nicholas Cage as Superman, and I think they expected me to be. I'm sorry, I'm just not, for the following reason:

I was on a panel at a convention some years ago, and the announcement had just been made that Michael Keaton was going to play Batman. Fans were asking the panelists what they thought about the fact that the director of Pee Wee's Big Adventure had cast Mr. Mom to play Batman. All the other panelists railed against the concept and were roundly applauded.

I said, "Uh, guys, look — I hate to say this, but I have no intrinsic problem with this. I mean, he's an actor. Actors act. Just because Keaton and Burton are known mostly for comedy doesn't mean the film is automatically going to be campy. Maybe it'll be good." It was the first and only time I've ever been roundly, and loudly, booed.

The fans later changed their tune. But I refuse to change mine. I have no intrinsic problem with Nick Cage playing Superman. None. Yes, his nose is more angular than we've come to expect, and his eyes are oddly set. But, then again, if you look back at the beginning, so were Superman's back in the beginning.

What he does seem more than capable of projecting is a guy who carries the weight of the world on his shoulders, and if that's the direction that Burton is going — a man with super-human powers and, consequently, super-human responsibilities that are weighing heavily upon him — it could be pretty thought-provoking. A return to the roots of Superman beyond Action Comics #1, back to Philip Wylie's superb novel, The Gladiator.

Can he carry off the classic
